

FILM SCORE

M O N T H L Y

Volume 2, Number 8 • $3.95

CD REVIEWS:
John Williams,
Casablanca,
& More!

DISPATCHES FROM THE FRONT LINES

Basil's Battle of the Bugs

Kicking Butt with Starship Troopers

Hans Zimmer vs. FSM
Interview Part 2: The Stunning Conclusion!

What a Game!
Howard Shore on The Game and Cop Land

The terrifying

saga continues...

Relive Ripley's 4th journey with the unforgettable, eerie score composed by John Frizzell.

The soundtrack enters the earth's atmosphere on November 11, 1997 at 00:01 and the film explodes nationally on November 26th!

www.rcavictor.com

FOXTEL PICTURES ARTWORK, PHOTOS AND TM © 1997 TWENTIETH CENTURY FOX FILM CORPORATION.
ALL RIGHTS RESERVED. UNAUTHORIZED DUPLICATION IS A VIOLATION OF APPLICABLE LAWS.
OTHER TRADEMARKS: MARCAESTER PICTURES/GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY • © 1997 BIRD MUSIC

RCAVICTOR

Good Citizenship

Starship Troopers is a movie that provides unbelievable special effects and thrilling action, but is something you can actually sit down and discuss. How ballsy is this: the heroes are basically fascists, some of the characters are genuinely unlikable, and you actually don't know who is going to be killed. You want to see the bugs obliterated, but at the same time you're wondering if this is a distorted manifest destiny allegory, with the bugs the American Indians.

Bobbie and Basil Poledouris

Basil Poledouris's score walks a fine line, almost in the tradition of Jerry Fielding's scores for Sam Peckinpah, where the tone shifts radically from moment to moment amidst the violence and shifts of identification. There's plenty of thematic material, encompassing both the heroic boldness that the composer does best, and more post-tonal harmonic writing new to him. It's not a mythological score like Conan the Barbarian, or various sci-fi epics of the past, but a textural, muscular one. We've followed its creation for over six months, and it's been a joy to watch it unfold in an environment conducive to art as well as entertainment.

With everybody psyched up—and rightfully so—to see and hear Paul Verhoeven and Basil Poledouris at their best, we figured this was a perfect opportunity to inaugurate our new Film Score Monthly series of video composer interviews. For many fans, film composers are these disembodied names on movies and CD booklets, and maybe words in an interview. You've heard their music, and maybe you know some facts about their careers, but you don't really have a sense of them, as people.

For our first video, we spent a weekend with Basil and Bobbie Poledouris, and filmed them talking about Basil's music and their life together. We visited their daughter Zoë, who sings at the graduation party in Starship Troopers. We went out on Basil's boat for a sail. The video—professionally shot and edited—will also include family photos and recording session footage, and will be scored by Basil himself, performing his film themes on piano.

We had a wonderful time with the Poledourises and want to bring that experience to you. See the ordering information on p. 25—both VHS NTSC (U.S.) and PAL (European format) videotapes are available. We want to do a whole series of these videos, to profile film composers as artists and people. Consider how cool it would be if someone had done this with Max Steiner, Franz Waxman and Bernard Herrmann in the 1950s, or with John Barry, Maurice Jarre and Ennio Morricone as they were in the 1960s.

The video series isn't the only thing we've got cooking at FSM. We've just moved into our new offices—address at right—where we are sharing space with Filmmaker magazine. (The old address still works!) We have all sorts of plans for 1998, including another upgrade of the format. To close out '97 will be a double-sized issue for November and December—with a ton of CD reviews we've been meaning to print. See you then!

-Lukas Kendall

FILM SCORE

M O N T H L Y

VOL. 2, NO. 8 • OCTOBER 1997

DEPARTMENTS

- 4 News & Information
- 9 Reader Ads
- 11 Mail Bag: Letters from Readers
- 38 Events Round-Up 1997
Photos from recent film music gatherings: Jerry Goldsmith, Lalo Schiffrin, David Arnold and more.

FEATURES

- 15 The Men with the Junk Metal Instruments
The Boston-based Alloy Orchestra provides new scores to classic silent films.
- 17 The Final Confrontation: Zimmer vs. FSM
Interview Showdown with Hans Zimmer, Part 2!
- 20 Basil's Battle of the Bugs
Basil Poledouris reteams with director Paul Verhoeven for Starship Troopers.
- 29 Playing the Game in Shore Land
Doug Adams interviews Howard Shore about his latest works: Cop Land and The Game.

REVIEWS

- 33 SCORE: Soundtrack CD Reviews
Seven Years in Tibet, The End of Violence, Mimic, The Full Monty and other new releases.
- 37 Golden Age, New CDs
A look at new restorations of How the West Was Won, Casablanca and The Searchers.

FILM SCORE MONTHLY (ISSN 1077-4289) is published monthly for $29.95 per year by Lukas Kendall, 5455 Wilshire Blvd, Suite 1500, Los Angeles CA 90036-4201. Application to mail at periodicals postage rate is pending at Los Angeles, CA. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to FILM SCORE MONTHLY, 5455 Wilshire Blvd, Suite 1500, Los Angeles CA 90036-4201.

News & Information

Events

Several events happened without enough notice to announce:

On October 23, agent Richard Kraft was honored by the Crohn's & Colitis Foundation of America at their 22nd Annual Awards Dinner. Richard lost his brother David in 1993 to Crohn's, a bowel disorder, and has supported the foundation in their efforts to find a cure. Performing at the fundraiser were Kraft's clients Elmer Bernstein (To Kill a Mockingbird), Danny Elfman (The Nightmare Before Christmas), Jerry Goldsmith (Rudy), Basil Poledouris (Lonesome Dove), Marc Shaiman (funny songs), and Wendy and Lisa. Most performed their music at piano, while Goldsmith conducted a 16-piece orchestra. Donations can be sent to CCFA, 4201 Wilshire Blvd, Suite 624, Los Angeles CA 90010.

Jerry Goldsmith, Pat Williams and Marco Beltrami were among the performers at the Young Musicians Foundation's 43rd annual benefit on October 24, also in Beverly Hills.

Creature Features has a CD signing scheduled with Basil Poledouris for Starship Troopers

on Saturday, November 8. Signed CDs will also be available through the mail; write 1802 West Olive Blvd, Burbank CA 91506; ph: 818-842-9382, fax: 818-842-0752.

DVD

Upcoming DVDs with isolated music tracks from Warner Home Video: December 16: Camelot, Amadeus, Contact (isolated Alan Silvestri score in 5.1-channel surround, plus audio commentaries by Jodie Foster, Robert Zemeckis and Ken Ralston). Also December: Pee-wee's Big Adventure (isolated Danny Elfman score). January: Little Shop of Horrors, The Shawshank Redemption. Early 1998: Excalibur (isolated music by Wagner, Orff, Trevor Jones).

Warner Home Video has embarked on a deluxe DVD of Superman: The Movie (1978) for release in late '98. This will hopefully include a supplemental section of scenes added for the TV broadcast. There is no word yet on whether there will be isolated John Williams music.

Promos

Intrada will be producing promos on behalf of Laurence Rosenthal of his scores to Becket and Meteor, and one on behalf of Craig Safan of Money for Nothing. These will be ready in December.

Incoming!

David Arnold's album of James Bond cover songs, Shaken and Stirred, is out in England, with a U.S. release on Sire on November 25. The CD is already spawning hit singles in England.

Danny Elfman's score to Flubber will be out on Walt Disney at the time of the film.

John Ottman's Incognito will be released on BMG when the movie comes out in February. Ottman will make a promo of his Snow White score (Sigourney Weaver, cable movie) if it does not come out commercially.

Plough Down Sillion Music has released J.A.C. Redford's music to The Trip to Bountiful (1985 film, folk/orchestra score, 22 minutes). Order the CD through the composer's web site, www.jacredford.com, and receive a free copy of his promotional CD of Heavyweights.

Now out from Virgin Classics in the U.K. is a soundtrack to the new British film The Gambler, containing both the original score by Gerard Schurmann and the replacement by Brian Lock; parts of both were used in the final film.

Sony in Italy has released Richard III, Ennio Morricone's new score to the classic silent film.

ECM has released a new recording by the Tomasz Stanko Septet of jazz music by the late Polish composer Krzysztof Komeda, who scored Roman Polanski's films prior to his death in 1969.

Pushed back to January at the earliest from Label X Germany is Komeda's music to Roman Polanski's horror-comedy, Dance of the Vampires (1967), aka The Fearless Vampire Killers. Valhalla (Ron Goodwin, 1986 animated film) is also forthcoming.

Verve has released on CD the 1966 non-soundtrack Lalo Schiffrin album, The Dissection and Reconstruction of Music from the Past as Performed by the Inmates of Lalo Schiffrin's Demented Ensemble as a Tribute to the Memory of the Marquis de Sade.

Due in January from Intimita Music is an album to The Wizard of Speed and Time (John Massari). A limited number of test pressings will be available in December. Write Intimita Music, PO Box 931493, Los Angeles CA 90093.

Wilde (Debbie Wiseman) has been released by MCI in the U.K. (the phone company?).

Fox's upcoming animated musical Anastasia (songs by Stephen Flaherty and Lynn Ahrens, score by David Newman) will be out on an Atlantic CD.

Next from CAM in Italy is La Maja Desnuda (Angelo F. Lavagnino). See <http://www.cam-ost.it>.

Caleb Sampson's score to Fast, Cheap and Out of Control, the new film by Errol Morris (Thin Blue Line), will be out on Accurate Records, distributed by Rounder.

Record Label Round-Up

Castle Communications

Forthcoming for 1998 from this England label are CD reissues from the Pye catalog, including Roy Budd scores to be determined.

CDG

In the planning stages is a new concert work by Howard Shore for the London Philharmonic Orchestra and chorus.

Cinevox

This Italian label has reissued Goblin's scores to Profondo Rosso (Deep Red), Tenebre and Phenomena in expanded editions. The latest release is Buio Omega, the first time on CD, complete score plus alternate versions. A U.S. outlet is Shocking Images, PO Box 601972, Sacramento CA 95860, ph/fax: 916-974-0175.

FILM SCORE MONTHLY

Vol. 2, No. 8 • October 1997

STAFF

Editor Lukas Kendall
Minister of Science and Chief Defender of the Faith Jeff Bond Contributors Doug Adams, Brent Bowles, Andy Dursin, Jonathan Follett, Jonathan Foster, Rudy Koppl, Tom Linehan, Christopher Walsh.
Design Joe Sikoryak
Paraphrase of the Month
 "You weren't even born then!"
 -Jerry Goldsmith, on many occasions

CONTACT INFO

Mail 5455 Wilshire Blvd Suite 1500
 Los Angeles CA 90036-4201
Phone 213-937-9890
Fax 213-937-9277
e-mail Lukas@filmscoremonthly.com
The Soundtrack Handbook

Is a six-page listing of mail order dealers, books, societies, etc. It is sent automatically to all subscribers or to anyone upon request.

© 1997 Lukas Kendall

www.filmscoremonthly.com

FILMS IN RELEASE

Title	Composer	Record Label
Boogie Nights	Michael Penn	Capitol
Devil's Advocate	James N. Howard	TVT
The Edge	Jerry Goldsmith	RCA Victor
The End of Violence	Ry Cooder	Outpost
Eve's Bayou	Terence Blanchard	MCA, Sonic Images
Fairy Tale: A True Story	Zbigniew Preisner	Icon
The Full Monty	Anne Dudley	RCA Victor
The Game	Howard Shore	PolyGram
Gang Related	Mickey Hart	Death Row
Gattaca	Michael Nyman	Virgin
The House of Yes	Rolfe Kent
I Know What You Did...	John Debney	Columbia
The Ice Storm	Mychael Danna	Velvet
In & Out	Marc Shaiman	Motown
Kiss the Girls	Mark Isham	Milan
L.A. Confidential	Jerry Goldsmith	Restless
A Life Less Ordinary	David Arnold	London
Most Wanted	Paul Buckmaster	Milan
The Peacemaker	Hans Zimmer	Dreamworks
Playing God	Richard Hartley	Milan
Rocket Man	Michael Tavera
Seven Years in Tibet	John Williams	Sony Classical
Soul Food	Wendy & Lisa	LaFace
U-Turn	Ennio Morricone	Epic
Washington Square	Jan A.P. Kaczmarek	Varèse Sarabande

Citadel

Out is Black Sunday/Baron Blood (reissue of Bay Cities CD with more elaborate packaging).

November releases: Into Thin Air: Death on Everest (Lee Holdridge, TV movie, orchestral), and the first in Citadel's Legendary Hollywood series of CD compilations, Miklós Rózsa. This features the entire Hollywood Spectacular album previously released on Bay Cities, plus two overtures from an out-of-print Varèse album, The World, the Flesh and the Devil and Because of Him.

Due over the course of 1998 are three volumes of Shostakovich film scores newly recorded in Moscow.

Crippled Dick Hot Wax!

Now out from the U.S. branch of this German label is Schoolgirl (Gert Wilden & Orchestra), music from the 1968-1972 German series of erotic films.

Due in January are Beat at Cinecittà Vol. 1 and 2, compilations of Italian film themes from the '60s and '70s. See www.crippled.com.

edel America

Imminent is Red Corner (Thomas Newman, new Richard Gere film).

Fifth Continent

Rescheduled for 1998 are DTS CDs of The Night Digger (Bernard Herrmann), The Best Years of Our Lives (Hugo Friedhofer, expanded), and King Kong (Max Steiner, 1976 re-recording), remastered in DTS 5.1 Digital Surround. (They will not play on regular CD players without a DTS decoder.)

GNP/Crescendo

Hopefully due by the end of the year is a Godzilla compilation of original tracks, the first U.S. release of much of this music. Forthcoming for 1998 is Greatest Sci-Fi Hits Volume 4 (Neil Norman and His Cosmic Orchestra).

The next Star Trek album will probably be a Jay Chattaway Star Trek: The Next Generation CD (including "Tin Man" and his score for the ride at Las Vegas' "Star Trek: The Experience"), followed by a Deep Space Nine Volume 2 ("Trials and Tribulations" and "Way of the Warrior" by Dennis McCarthy).

Hollywood

November 11: American Werewolf in Paris (various artists). November 18: Home Alone 3 (Nick Glennie-Smith), The Rainmaker (Elmer Bernstein).

Intrada

November 18: Last Stand at Sabre River (David Shire), TNT Tom Selleck western; The Rough Riders (Peter Bernstein), John Milius cable western, theme by Elmer Bernstein; Disappearance of Garcia Lorca (Mark McKenzie).

Intrada is both a label and mail order outlet, write for free catalog to 1488 Vallejo St, San Francisco CA 94109; ph: 415-776-1333.

Koch

Due early to mid-1998 are an Erich Wolfgang Korngold film music album (Juarez, The Sea Wolf, The Sea Hawk, Elizabeth and Essex) and a Miklós Rózsa concert album (cello concerto and piano concerto), recorded in New Zealand.

Marco Polo

Marco Polo has just gone through a change in location and management and their film music re-recordings (by John Morgan and Bill Stromberg, in Moscow) are in scheduling flux. King Kong (Max Steiner, complete 73 minute score) is expected in January. The Herrmann album (complete Garden of Evil and 13-minute suite from Prince of Players) is now set for (gasp) July 1998 at the earliest.

There are no release dates set for: Alfred Newman: Hunchback of Notre Dame (approx. 50 minutes), Beau Geste (20 minutes), All About Eve (3-4 minutes); Philip Sainton's Moby Dick score (1956), including unused cues; and Victor Young: The Uninvited, Gulliver's Travels (1939), Bright Leaf, main title march from The Greatest Show on Earth.

Recently recorded in Moscow by Stromberg and Morgan for release if Marco Polo feels like it are: Devotion (Erich Wolfgang Korngold) and Mr. Skeffington (Franz Waxman).

They Died with Their Boots On (Max Steiner) will be recorded in April.

Milan

November 25: Wings of the Dove (Ed Shearmer, 19th century period film). February 24: The Real Blond (various). Milan will be issuing Lolita (new film, Ennio Morricone) in the U.S. if the movie ever comes out here.

Also forthcoming is StarGate, music from the Showtime series. However, the music has been so drastically re-edited for the show and the album that both composers David Arnold and Joel Goldsmith have asked to have their names removed. Hmm, An Allan Smithee CD?

Nonesuch

Due November is Philip Glass's score to Kun Dun (Martin Scorsese Dalai Lama epic).

Planned for January is a new recording of Humoresque (London Symphony Orchestra, cond. Andrew Litton), featuring the violin pieces composed and arranged by Franz Waxman, as well as the Cole Porter and George Gershwin songs heard in the film.

Pendulum

Imminent: Big Top Pee Wee (Danny Elfman, CD reissue), Clash of the Titans (Laurence Rosenthal, first time on CD), and Dune: The Original Score (music for the 1984 film as originally conceived by David Paich and Toto, plus demos that got them the job). Planned for 1998 is Watership Down (Angela Morley).

Play It Again

Due this December are a fourth volume of The A to Z of British TV Themes, and a 2CD set of rare John Barry arrangements from 1959-64, The Hits and the Misses.

Geoff Leonard and Pete Walker's book, The Music of John Barry, will most likely be out next year from an independent U.K. publisher. See www.auracle.com/pia.

PolyGram

November 25: Tomorrow Never Dies (David Arnold, title song performed by Sheryl Crow, on A&M). December: Winter Guest (Michael Kamen). Early 1998: Wag the Dog (Mark Knopfler).

Several new recordings are coming from Decca early next year. Michael Kamen has recorded Mister Kamen's Opus, a new recording of his themes from Highlander, Die Hard, Robinson Crusoe (premiere), Mr. Holland's Opus, Don Juan de Marco, Winter Guest (new Alan Rickman film), Circle of Friends, and Brazil. Kamen has also recorded a Concerto for Guitar and Orchestra.

John Barry, newly signed to a recording contract with PolyGram (he was most recently with Sony), has written a non-soundtrack tone poem for release on Decca, The Beyondness of Things. The piece was recorded in October at Abbey Road, London and will be out in March/April 1998. Barry's score to Mercury Rising (new Alec Baldwin/Bruce Willis film) will also be released on Decca/PolyGram.

Premier

Due November 18 is The Manchurian Candidate (1962, first-ever release). New York-based Premier Records is distributed by Empire Music.

Prometheus

Due next from this Belgian label is The Long Road Home (Lee Holdridge, Holocaust documentary).

Razor & Tie

January 20: What's New Pussycat? (Burt Bacharach), A Fistful of Dollars (Ennio Morricone), straight CD reissues of the LPs.

RCA Victor

Alien Resurrection (John Frizzell) will be out November 11.

Reel Sounds

Forthcoming for 1998 are Love God (hard rock plus score by Stuart Gray, of Lubricated Goat), Somewhere in the City (John Cale), and Wicked City (Orange 9mm, Swift and Civ).

FOX NIGHT AT THE BOWL

On Friday, September 19, conductor John Mauceri and the Hollywood Bowl Orchestra presented a concert that was a dream come true for fans of movie music: The Big Picture: A Musical Salute to 20th Century Fox.

The festivities opened with Alfred Newman's indelible 20th Century Fox Fanfare, one of the most recognizable signatures in movie history. A huge, CinemaScope-style screen stood over the orchestra, projecting the most recent Fox logo, and this segued into a medley (arranged by George del Barrio) celebrating the studio's first 50 years.

The star of the next piece of footage was no less than Alfred Newman himself, conducting the overture to How to Marry a Millionaire with a full orchestra, strangely superimposed above John Mauceri's live orchestra... a juxtaposition that allowed the audience to easily gauge just how close the real players were to the cinematic ones.

The orchestra next essayed Alex North's cool and glistening title theme to the 1963 epic Cleopatra, followed by the mammoth pageantry of Cleopatra's entrance into Rome. Seeing this music performed live (with the Technicolor images of one of the most gigantic productions in movie history projected overhead) was a revelation, revealing North's slicing, crystalline orchestrations in all their original glory.

The seemingly immortal composer David Raksin, one of several composers present in the audience, was represented next, with his famous film-noir romance Laura. Raksin's theme is undeniably moody, with undertones of deep regret. The concert then took a major shift in tone as a wild salute to Carmen Miranda (arranged by Richard Stone) took center stage. Younger readers will be hard put to understand the concept of Carmen Miranda, but she was like a cross between Bette Midler and Charro (whoops—now I have to explain the concept of Charro...), and she was famous for wearing large hats full of fruit. Stone's concert piece was arranged around many of Miranda's most famous songs, mostly based around a samba beat.

Mauceri next introduced footage from Fox's most successful musical, Robert Wise's adaptation of Rodgers and Hammerstein's The Sound of Music, by explaining how much he feared having to synch his orchestra to Julie Andrews's busting out "The Hills Are Alive with the Sound of Music" following an extended series of aerial shots. He had missed it twice and made it once in rehearsal, so when the orchestra timed the thing perfectly the result was a burst of applause from the audience.

After the opening song, the film clip segued to the climax of the picture, with the family Von Trapp escaping from pursuing Nazis in a suspenseful sequence well mounted by Robert Wise, accompanied by Irwin Kostal's underscore, which adapted the songs' melodies. The finale, with "Climb Every Mountain" heroically performed by the orchestra and the Mitch Hanlon Singers, was a powerful, moving moment that brought the first half of the concert to a rousing finish.

The concert's second half opened with Leslie Bricusse's hit song "Talk to the Animals" from the '60s musical bomb Doctor Dolittle, performed in a concert arrangement by Nan Schwartz Mishkin. Far more satisfying was yet another Alfred Newman masterpiece, the 1953 gloom-and-doom-laden Christianity parable The Robe. After Newman's foreboding choral opening, the orchestra accompanied the film's lengthy crucifixion sequence, with Victor Mature (the Sly Stallone of his era) agonizing over the death of his personal savior at the hands of the Roman Empire (personified by a young Richard Burton).

Mauceri then conducted Danny Elfman's delicate, ethereal Edward Scissorhands. With its soothing choral textures and chimes, Elfman's work, and Tim Burton's film, offered an interesting contrast to the religious epics of the past as they covered somewhat the same ground with Burton's tale of an alienated mechanical boy who can't fit into contemporary society.

The next combination of music and cinematic imagery was a momentous moment for fans of Jerry Goldsmith, as his magnificent Planet of the Apes was performed for the first time in almost three decades. Mauceri and his orchestra assembled the components of Goldsmith's groundbreaking orchestrations, including steel mixing bowls, tam-tams and a ram's horn, and recreated the majority of three pieces: "The Search Continues," "The Clothes Snatchers" and "The Hunt."

There were a few snafus along the way: while the presence of the steel mixing bowls was certainly welcome, the tones as heard in the film score didn't seem to come across, and the ram's horn in "The Hunt" didn't make it until its second call. But overall the recreation of these incredible musical passages was spellbinding.

Anything that occurred after Planet of the Apes would have been an anticlimax, and that was the case with a suite of David Arnold's patriotic Independence Day, accompanied by a montage of big explosions from the movie. Evaporated to the basic ingredients of Aliens Attack + Americans Kick Their Ass to the tune of tin-whistle patriotism, the thing seemed awfully slight coming on the heels of Charlton Heston getting netted by apes on horseback.

The concert wound up with a lengthy unveiling of Fox's big-budget animated feature Anastasia, with songs by Stephen Flaherty and Lynn Ahrens ("Journey to the Past" and "Once Upon a December") performed by vocalist Liz Callaway, fresh from "Cats." The songwriters are responsible for the current, successful stage adaptation of Ragtime, although the songs featured here didn't quite scale the dizzying heights of that production.

Mauceri and the orchestra were persuaded to launch an encore, and what an encore it turned out to be: the second half of "The Last Battle" and "The Throne Room" from Star Wars, synched to a brand-new print of the sequences from the Special Edition. This was about ten times more exciting than the John Williams-conducted Star Wars concert at the Bowl a few weeks earlier, for a simple reason: this is the music people remember from the film. The suite medleys created for this concert and Williams's were entertaining enough, but nothing matched the impact of seeing real film music with its visual inspiration on a giant screen for the audience to appreciate.

For these moments, you didn't have to watch the picture, and in fact it was more fun to watch the orchestra through binoculars. Ironically, for Star Wars the sound effects and dialogue were played so loud that the live "mix" was almost less favorable to the music than the actual movie dub, but like the rest of the concert the images were there, and people could get an idea of the complexity, the challenges of split-second timing, and the sheer musical brilliance created by some of film's greatest composers.

—Jeff Bond

Rhino

Due November 11 is a 25th anniversary deluxe 2CD set of Superfly (Curtis Mayfield). Due early next year are Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers at RKO (2CD set), and Mario Lanza at M-G-M.

A Volume 2 is in the works of The Simpsons (Alf Clausen), for release March/April 1998.

Rykodisc

Coming next year in The Deluxe MGM Soundtrack Series:

January 13: Rancho Deluxe (Jimmy Buffett, 1975), Ned Kelly (Shel Silverstein, Mick Jagger, various country, 1975), Lenny (Ralph Burns, 1974), Across 110th Street (Bobby Womack, Peace, JJ Johnson, 1972 blaxploitation).

February 24: The Great Escape (Elmer Bernstein, 1963), Return of the Magnificent Seven (1966 album recording of The Magnificent Seven done at time of Return of the Seven sequel, Elmer Bernstein), In the Heat of the Night/They Call Me Mr. Tibbs (Quincy Jones, 1967/1970), Paris Blues (Duke Ellington, 1961), Some Like It Hot (Alfred Deutsch, various, 1959).

April: After the Fox (Burt Bacharach, 1966), The Knack (John Barry, 1965), The Thomas Crown Affair (Michel Legrand, 1968), Here We Go Round the Mulberry Bush (various rock, 1968), and one other title to be determined.

None of the albums will be expanded from their original LPs, but they will have dialogue excerpts included on separate tracks, as well as CD-ROM extras, fold-out poster booklets, and liner notes by the FSM staff.

UPCOMING MOVIES

The story on Mad City is that Thomas Newman's score was not rejected, but Philippe Sarde did restore some scenes as per the director's wishes. Newman retained sole composer credit in the main titles and advertising.

MARK ADLER: Ernest Joins the Army, Stanley and Livingston (Hallmark).

DAVID ARNOLD: Tomorrow Never Dies (James Bond, title singer: Sheryl Crow), Godzilla (Emmerich/Devlin).

LUIS BACALOV: Polish Wedding, B. Monkey.

ANGELO BADALAMENTI: The Blood Oranges (October Films, d. Philip Hass).

LESLEY BARBER: A Price Above Rubies.

DANNY BARNES: The Newton Boys (d. Linklater, with music by Barnes's band, The Bad Livers).

JOHN BARRY: Goodbye Lover, Mercury Rising (Bruce Willis, Alec Baldwin, mystery/suspense).

STEVE BARTEK: Meet the Doodies (Disney).

TYLER BATES: Denial.

ROGER BELLON: One Tough Cop (d. Bruno Barreto).

MARCO BELTRAMI: Scream 2.

RICHARD RODNEY BENNETT: The Tale of Sweeney Todd (d. John Schlesinger).

DAVID BERGAUD: Prince Valiant (Paramount), Wrongfully Accused (Morgan Creek).

ELMER BERNSTEIN: The Rainmaker (Francis Ford Coppola), Magic Hour (Paul Newman, Gene Hackman).

SIMON BOSWELL: Photographing Fairies, American Perfekt, Dad Savage, Pardita Durango.

BRUCE BROUGHTON: Fantasia Continues (transitions), Krippendorf's Tribe (Disney).

PAUL BUMMASTER: The Maker (Matthew Modine, d. Tim Hunter).

CARTER BURWELL: Big Lebowski (Coen Bros.), Jackal (Bruce Willis).

EDMUND CHOI: Wide Awake (Miramax, youth comedy).

ALF CLAUSEN: Half Baked (Universal, comedy).

GEORGE S. CLINTON: Mortal Kombat: Annihilation.

RAY COLCORD: Hearwood (Jason Robards).

ERIC COLVIN: Setting Son (d. Lisa Satriano), Incident at Dharan (Showtime).

BILL CONTI: The Real McCoy.

MICHAEL CONVERTINO: Shut Up and Dance.

STEWART CPELAND: Four Days in September (d. Bruno Barreto), Little Boy Blue, Welcome to Woop-Woop.

JOHN CORIGLIANO: The Red Violin (Samuel L. Jackson).

CHUCK D (from Public Enemy): An Allan Smithee Film.

MYCHAEL DANNA: The Sweet Hereafter.

ALEXANDRE DESPLAT: The Avengers (U.K.).

GARY DeMICHELE: Ship of Fools (d. Stanley Tucci, Campbell Scott).

PATRICK DOYLE: Great Expectations, Quest for Camelot (Warner Bros. animated), Stepmom (Julia Roberts).

ANNE DUDLEY: American History X (New Line).

TAN DUN: Fallen (Denzel Washington).

THE DUST BROS.: Orgazmo, Dead Man on Campus.

JOHN DU PREZ: Labor Pains.

RANDY EDELMAN: 6 Days/7 Nights (d. Ivan Reitman, Harrison Ford/Anne Heche), For Richer or Poorer.

CLIFF EIDELMAN: Montana.

DANNY ELFMAN: Flubber (Robin Williams), Good Will Hunting (d. Gus Van Sant), Superman (d. Tim Burton), American Psycho (film of Bret Easton Ellis novel); Elfman is also contributing an original source cue to Scream 2.

STEPHEN ENDELMAN: Shakespeare's Sister, Tempting Fate.

DOUGLASS FAKE: Holly vs. Hollywood (independent).

GEORGE FENTON: Courtesan, Object of My Affections (Jennifer Aniston).

FRANK FITZPATRICK: Players Club (Ica Cube), Lani Loa.

MICK FLEETWOOD: 14 Palms.

DAVID MICHAEL FRANK: A Kid in Aladdin's Court, The Prince, Perfect Target, The Family Bloom (Penelope Ann Miller).

JOHN FRIZZELL: Alien: Resurrection, Jane Austen's Mafia (Jim Abrahams).

RICHARD GIBBS: Music from Another Room, Doctor Dolittle (Eddie Murphy, Fox).

PHILIP GLASS: Kun Dun (Scorsese), The Truman Show (Jim Carrey).

NICK GLENNIE-SMITH: Home Alone 3, Man in the Iron Mask (muskeeter movie, MGM).

ELLIOT GOLDENTHAL: Sphere (d. Barry Levinson, sci-fi, Dustin Hoffman), The Butcher Boy (d. Neil Jordan, '60s Irish setting), Blue Vision (horror, d. Jordan).

JERRY GOLDSMITH: Deep Rising, Lost in Space (d. Stephen Hopkins), U.S. Marshals (The Fugitive 2), Small Soldier (d. Joe Dante), A Small Miracle (aka Owen Mooney, Disney).

JOEL GOLDSMITH: StarGate (Showtime), Reasonable Doubt (d. Randall Kleiser, Melanie Griffith).

HARRY GREGSON-WILLIAMS: Liar (Renée Zellweger), The Borrowers, The Replacement Killers (Mira Sorvino, Chow Yun-Fat).

GREYBOY ALLSTARS: Zero Effect (Castle Rock, Bill Pullman, Ben Stiller).

LARRY GROUPE: Storm of the Heart, Sinners (w/ Kenneth Branagh), Sleeping with the Lion, Making Contact, Raven's Blood (d. Molly Smith).

CHRIS HAJIAN: Chairman of the Board (Carrot Top).

RICHARD HARTLEY: Victory, Curtain Call (U.K.), All the Little Animals (U.K. independent).

RICHARD HARVEY: Jane Eyre (U.K.).

LEE HOLDRIDGE: Family Plan (Leslie Nielsen), Two for Texas (Turner cable), The Secret of NIMH 2 (animated, MGM).

JAMES NEWTON HOWARD: The Postman (Kevin Costner).

JAMES HORNOR: Titanic (d. James Cameron, solo vocals by Sissel Kyrkjebø), Mighty Joe Young, The Mask of Zorro (d. Martin Campbell), Deep Impact.

SØREN HYLDGAARD: Island of Darkness (Denmark-Norway), Skyggen (Denmark), The Other Side (d. Peter Flinth), The Boy and the Lynx (Finland/U.S.), Help I'm a Fish (with songs).

MARK ISHAM: Afterglow (Nick Nolte, Julie Christie), The Education of Little Tree (d. Richard Friedenberg, period film), The Gingerbread Man (d. Robert Altman).

ADRIAN JOHNSTON: I Want You.

TREVOR JONES: Dark City (Alex Proyas), The Mighty (d. Peter Chelsom, Miramax, collaborating with Peter Gabriel), Desperate Measures (d. Barbet Schroeder, Michael Keaton), Lawn Dogs, Talk of Angels (Miramax), Frederic Wilde (Fox, d. Richard Loncraine), Plunkett &

MacLaine (PolyGram, d. Jake Scott—Ridley's son).

MICHAEL KAMEN: Winter Guest (d. Alan Rickman), The Avengers (Uma Thurman).

BRIAN KEANE: Illtown (d. Nick Gomez), Stephen King's Night Flier (d. Mark Pavia, New Line).

ROLFE KENT: Us Begins with You (Anthony Edwards).

WILLIAM KIDD: The King and I (Morgan Creek, animated).

BRIAN LANGSBARD: Johnny Skidmarks.

DANIEL LANOIS: The Postman (original songs).

CHRIS LENNERTZ: The Art House (parody on independent films; also music supervisor).

JOHN LURIE: Clay Pigeons (prod. Ridley Scott).

MADER: Little City (Miramax), The Don's Analyst (cable movie), Clockwatchers (Parker Posey, Lisa Kudrow), The Wonderful Ice Cream Suit, Too Tired to Die.

HUMMIE MANN: The Rescuers Part II (Paramount), The Unknown Cyclist (Lea Thompson), Broke Down Palace (d. Jonathan Kaplan), Black Cat Run (HBO).

ANTHONY MARINELLI: God Said Ha! (Julia Sweeney), Hacks.

PHIL MARSHALL: Do You Want to Dance?

BRICE MARTIN: Depths of Grace, Eating L.A.

DAVID MAY: Shaking All Over (d. Dominique Forma).

DENNIS MCCARTHY: Letters from a Killer (d. David Carson).

JOEL MCNEELY: Virus, Zack and Reba (independent).

GIGI MERONI: The Good Life (Stallone, Hopper), Sinbad (Richard Gere).

CYNTHIA MILLAR: Digging to China (d. Timothy Hutton, cond. Elmer Bernstein).

MIKE MILLS: A Cool Dry Place (Vince Vaughn, Joey Lauren Adams, with new song from Mills's band, R.E.M.).

PAUL MILLS: Still Breathing (Brendan Fraser).

ENNIO MORRICONE: The Legend of the Pianist on the Ocean (Giuseppe Tornatore).

MARK MOTHERSBAUGH: Best Men, Breaking Up, Rugrats: The Movie, Dead Man on Campus (Paramount, prod. Gale Ann Hurd).

ROGER NEILL: Welcome to Kern Country (w/ Dust Bros.).

DAVID NEWMAN: Anastasia (Fox, animated musical).

THOMAS NEWMAN: Red Corner (Richard Gere), Oscar and Lucinda, The Horse Whisperer.

JOHN OTTMAN: Incognito (d. John Badham), The Apt Pupil (d. Bryan Singer, Ottman also editor).

VAN DYKE PARKS: Oliver Twist (Disney, Richard Dreyfuss, Elijah Wood), Barney: The Movie, Shadrach (d. Susanna Styron, October Films).

JEAN-CLAUDE PETIT: Beaumarchais, l'insolent (period), Messieurs les enfants, Le Complot d'Aristote.

NICHOLAS PIKE: Warrior of Waverly Street.

MICHAEL RICHARD PLOWMAN: Laser Hawk (Mark Hamill, Canada).

RACHEL PORTMAN: Home Fries, Beloved (Jonathan Demme), Legend of Mulan (Disney animated; songs by Matthew Wilder, music, and David Zippel, lyrics).

JOHN POWELL: Endurance (U.K. documentary).

ZBIGNIEW PREISNER: Dancing at Lughansa (Meryl Streep).

TREVOR RABIN: Home Grown (Billy Bob Thornton).

GRAEME REVELL: Suicide Kings (Trimark), Chinese Box, Phoenix (d. Danny Cannon), Dennis the Menace 2, The Hairy Bird.

J. PETER ROBINSON: Jackie Chan's Mr. Nice Guy (New Line Cinema), Firestorm (Fox).

PETER RODGERS MELNICK: The Only Thrill (Sam Shepherd, Diane Keaton).

RYUICHI SAKAMOTO: Snake Eyes.

CALEB SAMPSON: Fast, Cheap and Out of Control (d. Errol Morris).

LALO SCHIFRIN: Something to Believe In (love story), Tango.

GAILL SCHOEN: Déjà Vu (independent).

MARC SHAIMAN: My Giant (Billy Crystal).

HOWARD SHORE: Existence (d. David Cronenberg), Chinese Coffee (d. Al Pacino).

ALAN SILVESTRI: Mouse Hunt (Dreamworks, Nathan Lane), Tarzan: The Animated Movie (Disney, songs by Phil Collins), Holy Man (comedy), The Odd Couple 2.

MICHAEL SMALL: Elements (Rob Morrow).

NEIL SMOLAR: The Silent Cradle, Harper's Ferry.

MARK SNOW: The X-Files Movie.

FREDERIC TALGORN: Story of Monty Spinnerratz (Gorman, fantasy).

MICHAEL TAVERA: Mr. Magoo (Leslie Nielsen).

ERNEST TROOST: Carriers, Miracle in the Woods (Hallmark Hall of Fame).

TIM TRUMAN: Boogie Boy.

JONATHAN TUNICK: The Fantastics (based on Broadway show, d. Michael Ritchie).

CHRISTOPHER TYNG: Bring Me the Head of Mavis Davis (U.K. black comedy).

NERIDA TYSON-CHEW: Fern Gully 2.

C.J. VANSTON: Edwards and Hunt.

MERVYN WARREN: The Kiss (Jersey Films, Danny Devito/Queen Latifah).

DAVID WILLIAMS: The Prophecy II (horror, Christopher Walken), Phantoms (Miramax, Peter O'Toole, Ben Affleck).

JOHN WILLIAMS: Amistad (Spielberg), Saving Private Ryan (Spielberg).

PATRICK WILLIAMS: Julian Po (Christian Slater, Fine Line).

DEBBIE WISEMAN: Wilde (film about Oscar Wilde).

PETER WOLF: The Fearless Four (German, animated).

GABRIEL YAROD: Les Misérables.

CHRISTOPHER YOUNG: The Man Who Knew Too Little (Bill Murray spy spoof), Kilrain (thriller, Gyneth Paltrow), Hard Rain (formerly The Flood).

HANS ZIMMER: Prince of Egypt (Dreamworks, animated musical), As Good as It Gets (Jack Nicholson, James Brooks), The Thin Red Line (d. Terrence Malick).

Attention Gorfaine-Schwartz Clients: Your agency was only willing to provide Film Score Monthly with partial, dated information for selected clients. We have attempted to compile more comprehensive data on your upcoming projects from other sources.

All updates from composers, agents, production companies, publicists, fans or anyone else are gratefully appreciated. We want these lists to be accurate, but sometimes changing schedules, new titles, and plan old obscure movies cause errors. (I mean, what are some of these things?) Call Lukas at 213-937-9890, or e-mail Lukas@filmscoremonthly.com.

Scannan

Newly recorded by this U.K. label (City of Prague Philharmonic Orchestra, cond. Kenneth Alwyn) for early 1998 release is Max Steiner: Great Warner Bros. Film Music, with selections from Spencer's Mountain, The Flame and the Arrow, Dark at the Top of the Stairs, Mildred Pierce, Ice Palace, Now Voyager, The FBI Story, Life with Father, Sergeant York, The Hanging Tree, Parrish and Johnny Belinda.

Silva Screen

Due in Europe in early December is Nosferatu, a new score by James Bernard (of Dracula fame) for the silent German film. More newly recorded compilations are coming up for early 1998, titles to be announced.

Sonic Images

Composer Christopher Franke's label, previously self-distributed, has just acquired distribution by MCA/Universal. The following releases are available now by direct mail (see www.sonicimages.com) or will be in stores on:

November 4: Lois and Clark (Jay Gruska), Poltergeist: The Legacy (John Van Tongeren), Chicago Hope (Jeff Rona). November 18: Eve's Bayou (Terence Blanchard score) and five Babylon 5 episode-score CDs: "Severed Dreams," "Late Delivery from Avalon," "Walkabout," "Shadow Dancing" and "Z'Ha'Dum."

CONCERTS

California: November 21, 22

Santa Ana s.o.; Life with Father (Steiner), Airplane! (Bernstein).

February 7

San Francisco Sym.; Bride of Frankenstein (Waxman).

Connecticut: December 19, 20

New Haven s.o.; It's a Wonderful Life (Tiomkin).

Florida: November 19, 20

Boca Raton Pops; A Place in the Sun (Waxman), Kings Row (Korngold), The Godfather (Rota), Born Free (Barry), Mission: Impossible (Schiffrin).

January 7, 8

Boca Raton Pops; science fiction/monster movie music concert.

Illinois: November 22

Illinois Phil., Park Forest; A President's Country (Tiomkin).

Michigan: December 14

Ann Arbor s.o.; Intermezzo (Provost, arr. Steiner).

December 18, 19, 20, 21

Grand Rapids s.o.; It's a Wonderful Life (Tiomkin).

Minnesota: November 15

Rochester Orch.; The Magnificent Seven (Bernstein).

Tennessee: November 14, 15, 16

Memphis Sym.; Sense and Sensibility (Doyle, world premiere of 17-minute suite).

Texas: November 14, 15

San Antonio Sym.; Forrest Gump (Silvestri), Independence Day (Arnold).

December 7

Baytown s.o.; It's a Wonderful Life (Tiomkin).

January 15, 16, 17

Fort Worth Sym.; A President's Country Medley (Tiomkin).

Wisconsin: December 21

Milwaukee s.o.; It's a Wonderful Life (Tiomkin).

Australia: February 13, 14

Sydney s.o.; Romeo and Juliet: A Renaissance Timepiece (Cliff Eidel-man, non-soundtrack work commissioned for recent Varèse CD).

February 14

Adelaide s.o., Perth; Prince Valiant (Waxman), Vertigo (Herrmann).

Austria: January 1

Graz s.o.; Psycho, Vertigo, Marnie, North by Northwest (all Herrmann).

Canada: January 14, 15

National Arts Center, Ottawa; "Weep No More Sad Fountains" from Sense and Sensibility (Doyle, vocal by Jane Eglén).

February 19

Calgary s.o.; Jonathan Livingston Seagull (Holdridge).

France: December 7

Orchestra de Chambre Phil., Univ. Chermont-Ferrand; Psycho (Herrmann), complete score live to film, cond. Baudine Jam.

Japan: December 31

Hollywood Bowl Orchestra, Osaka; Anastasia (Flarity, new animated film), Mission: Impossible (Schiffrin), The Godfather (Rota), Titanic (Horner, tentative).

January 2, 3, 4

Hollywood Bowl Orchestra, Tokyo; same program as above.

Ron Jones/Vivaldi Dreams

Composer Ron Jones has organized a Vivaldi Dreams Concert, November 7, at the Pickwick Center, Embassy Room in Burbank, CA. The program includes five Vivaldi concertos and two new compositions by Jones, who will conduct the 14-member ensemble. Call 818-845-3902.

Dallas Symphony Goes Nuts

The Dallas Symphony will play a ton of film music in their upcoming concerts at Northpark Mall, cond. Richard Kaufman. November 14, 15, 16: The Generals (Patton/MacArthur, Goldsmith), Tuskegee Airmen (Holdridge). December 12, 13: Miracle on 34th Street (both Mockridge and Broughton versions), The Bishop's Wife (Friedhofer), It's a Wonderful Life (Tiomkin), The Holly and the Ivy (M. Arnold), A Christmas Carol (Waxman), Home Alone (Williams). February 12, 13: Goodbye, Mr. Chips (Addinsell), My Geisha (Waxman), Samson and Delilah (Young), Two for the Road (Mancini), Friendly Persuasion (Tiomkin), Tribute to Victor Young (arr. Mancini), An Affair to Remember (Friedhofer).

Toru Takemitsu Memorial Concert

There will be a tribute concert to Toru Takemitsu (1930-1996) at the Pasadena Civic Auditorium, November 17, 1997, 8PM; Masatoshi Mitsumoto cond. Concordia Orchestra: "Star/Isle" for Orchestra (1984), "November Steps" for Shokuhachi, Biwa, and Orchestra (1967), "Three Film Scores" for String Orchestra, "Family Tree" for Narrator and Orchestra (1992) and "For Toru" by Lukas Foss (1997). Call 818-449-7360; tickets $15-$40.

Star Wars in Japan

There will be a concert of Star Wars Trilogy music by the Tokyo New Philharmonic at Shinjuku Culture Center, Tokyo, on November 29, conducted by Shoji Kawai. See the site for John Williams Fan Club Japan, http://www.asahi-net.or.jp/~jfb6y-kmo/JWFC_home.html.

It's a Wonderful Life Recreation

There will be a recreation of the 1946 NPR broadcast of It's a Wonderful Life on December 8 from the Pasadena Playhouse to benefit the Pediatric AIDS foundation. This will be televised later on PBS. Cast will include Bill Pullman, Meg Ryan, Hume Cronyn, Danny DeVito, Rhea Perlman, and Christian Slater, and the 1946 Dimitri Tiomkin film score will be adapted for a small group as the music for the broadcast.

Schiffrin in Barcelona

Lalo Schiffrin will conduct the Orquestra Sinfonica de Barcelona in a concert of film music on January 16, 17; music by Schiffrin, Williams, Mancini, Rota, Theodorakis, Morricone. See www.obc.es/fr_tem.htm.

Doyle at Carnegie Hall

A new concert work by Patrick Doyle, "The Face in the Lake," will have its world premiere at Carnegie Hall on February 21, 1998. It was commissioned by Sony Classical for a recording involving composers writing new pieces around folk tales from various countries.

Jerry Goldsmith's Music for Orchestra

A 1970 concert work by Jerry Goldsmith, "Music for Orchestra," (8 min., modern/atonal) will be performed by the Los Angeles Philharmonic (cond. Esa-Pekka Salonen) on March 26 and 27, 1998. Also on the program are Shostakovich: Piano Concerto #2, Mendelssohn: Symphony No 4 and Copland: "El Salón México." Call 213-850-2000.

McNeely in Scotland

Joel McNeely will conduct the Royal Scottish National Philharmonic, Royal Concert Hall, Glasgow in a film music concert, May 8, 1998.

Due to the lead time of this magazine, it is possible some of this information is too late to do any good. Please accept our apologies.

This is a list of concerts with film music pieces. Contact the orchestra's box office for more information. Thanks go to John Waxman of Themes & Variations (<http://tnv.net>) for this list; he provides scores and parts to the orchestras.

For a list of silent film music concerts, see Tom Murray's web site: <http://www.cinemaweb.com/lcc>.

Sony

Men in Black (Danny Elfman score album) will be out in November, at the time of the video.

Upcoming on Sony Classical: November 18: Titanic (James Horner). December 9: Oscar and Lucinda (Thomas Newman). The Red Violin (John Corigliano; Joshua Bell, violin) will be out at the end of 1998.

Due early 1998 from Sony Legacy is the expanded 65-minute Star Trek: The Motion Picture (Jerry Goldsmith), a 2CD set with an expanded edition of Inside Star Trek (Gene Roddenberry '70s documentary) on disc two.

SouthEast

Imminent is Within the Rock (Rod Gammons and Tony Fennell, enhanced CD). Due after that from this Dutch label is Fear No Evil (Frank LaLoggia, enhanced CD).

Super Tracks

Forthcoming are First Kid (Richard Gibbs) and Dragonball Z (kids cartoon).

TVT

Out now is Mortal Kombat: Annihilation (songs, no score). Devil's Advocate (James Newton Howard) is imminent.

Varèse Sarabande

Out now are Starship Troopers (Basil Poledouris) and Frontiers (newly recorded Jerry Goldsmith sci-fi collection).

November 18: L.A. Confidential (Jerry Goldsmith score album), Mad City (Thomas Newman, no Philippe Sarde additional music), The Man Who Knew Too Little (Christopher Young), and Volume 2's of Hercules: The Legendary Journeys and Xena: Warrior Princess (both Joseph Lo Duca).

December 2: For Richer or Poorer (Randy Edelman), Mouse Hunt (Alan Silvestri), Shiloh (early 1997 movie, Joel Goldsmith).

The next Fox Classics releases will be out in January. One CD will be Forever Amber (David Raksin, 1947), the other a musical.

Due 1998 in the Film Classics series (Royal Scottish National Orchestra, conducted by the composer unless noted) are Torn Curtain (Bernard Herrmann, cond. Joel McNeely), The Magnificent Seven (Elmer Bernstein), The Great Escape (Bernstein), and Citizen Kane (Herrmann, cond. McNeely). The next Jerry Goldsmith recordings of Alex North scores are Viva Zapata! and The Agony and the Ecstasy.

Virgin

Due November 18 is The Sweet Hereafter (Mychael Danna). Chairman of the Board will be out at the time of the movie next year.

Walt Disney

Planned for January are expanded editions of Alice in Wonderland and Peter Pan. •

www.filmscoremonthly.com

TONS O' LINKS TO FILM MUSIC ON THE INTERNET

UPDATED EVERY WEEKDAY WITH "FILM SCORE DAILY,"
A NEW COLUMN OF NEWS,
REVIEWS & COMMENTARY

WEEKLY "E-MAIL BAG"

FRIDAY NEWS UPDATES
BY LUKAS!

Bookmark today:
<http://www.filmscoremonthly.com>

READER ADS

FEE INFO: Free: Up to five items. After five items, it's $5 for up to 10 items; $10 for up to 20 items; $20 for up to 30 items; and add $10 for each additional (up to) 10 more items.

Send U.S. funds only to Film Score Monthly, 5455 Wilshire Blvd Suite 1500, Los Angeles CA 90036-4201. No bootleg titles! You can send your ad by e-mail: Lukas@filmscoremonthly.com.

WANTED

Alan Etheridge (110 Daniel Dr, Clemson SC 29634; eaalan@clemson.edu) wants LP of Sunday, Bloody Sunday (1971 John Schlesinger film), on CAM label.

David Moraza (521 E 14th St, Apt 11-C, New York NY 10009) is looking for mint condition CDs for Fort Saganne (Philippe Sarde) and The Outlaw Josey Wales (Jerry Fielding).

FOR SALE/TRADE

David Bunn (82 Broadway, Chilton Polden, Bridgwater, Somerset TA7 9EQ, England; ph: 01278-722993) has for sale Ennio Morricone CDs Tempo di Uccidere, Time of Destiny, Il Principe del Deserto, Red Sonja/Bloodline, and many more in mint condition, plus spaghetti westerns by other composers.

Steven Dixon (27 Redcar Lane, Redcar, Cleveland TS10 3FF, United Kingdom; ph: 01642-490299) has for sale Ennio Morricone arrangements on vinyl: (1) Musica sul velluto (RCA PML 10386, Italy 1964), 10 arr. by Morricone, LP. (2) Ragazzi Pops! (RCA SA 17, Italy 1966), 1 top-rare arr. by Morricone, "Non è mai tardi," vocal Rita Monaco, LP. (3) Le Canzoni d'amore di Gianni Meccia (RCA PML 10353, Italy 1965, fold-out), 8 arr. by Morricone. (4) Catherine Spaak—Pensa a te (song from Malamondo), arr. Morricone, 45. (5) 45s by Little Peggy March & Louiselle (arr. by Morricone).

Adam Harris (PO Box 1131, Sheffield MA 01257-1131; ph: 413-229-3647) has a promo CD copy of Apollo 13 (music only, legit. MCA pressing) for auction, send bids.

Michael Mueller (701 S. University Blvd Apt K-354, Mobile AL 36609; ph: 334-414-1417) has the following CDs for sale/trade: Jagged Edge (Varèse CD Club, $50), Obsession (Masters Film Music, $50), The Reivers (Masters Music, $50), The Seventh Voyage of Sinbad (Varèse, $120), Steel Magnolias (Polygram, $50).

Dan Somber (4190 Bedford Ave, Apt 4J, Brooklyn NY 11229) has for sale thousands of film soundtracks and Broadway shows on vinyl LPs; some very rare, reasonably priced. Send $1.00 for catalog.

Brad Taylor (360 N Bedford Dr #215, Beverly Hills CA 90210; ph: 310-247-9955; fax: 310-556-8921) has the following CDs for trade: (1) promo copy of Hocus Pocus; (2) promo copy of Honor and Glory (Poledouris); (3) promo copy of Treasure Island: The Adventure Begins (Stone); (4) Red Heat (Horner); and (5) Dad (Horner). Also has more than 100 other CDs for sale or trade. "SASE or your list gets mine."

Ross Woodbury (PO Box 1387, Nevada City CA 95959; ph: 916-265-3622) has the following LPs for sale, all ex. to mint condition: Fantastic Planet (rare French import, $40), Thank Your Lucky Stars (all-star Warner Bros. WWII musical, $20), Once Upon a Time in America (rare E. Morricone, $20), Themes from Classic Sci-Fi, Fantasy and Horror Films (original Varèse, $20), Casino Royale (rare stereo version, $20).

FOR SALE/TRADE & WANTED

Robert Knaus (320 Fisher St, Walpole MA 02081; ph: 508-668-9398) wants on CD: Black Beauty, Sommersby (Elfman), Dead Again (Doyle), Final Analysis (Fenton), For Love or Money (Broughton), Scent of a Woman (Newman), Untamed Heart (Eidelman), Basic Instinct (Goldsmith), The Rocketeer (Horner), Alive (Howard). Has large collection of hard-to-get and "mystery" items. Write or call for list.

Dracoulis Stylianos (13 Pefkon St, 14122 Athens, Greece; ph: 0030-01-284-3717; fax: 0030-01-364-2889) wants the following LPs: Heaven's Gate, Cross of Iron, Dr. Phibes, Thomas Crown Affair, The Shining, Viva Maria, Night of the Living Dead, Jeux Interdits. Will give a $30 trade from his ad list (FSM Vol. 2, No. 6) for each one. Also has CDs: Digital Space, Cocoon: The Return, Georges Delerue: London Sessions Vol. 1, Hang 'Em High/The Way West/Scalphunters (EMI). Also wanted: specific laserdiscs, will trade CDs from list. Robert Trewin Kohl, please re-contact; you did not include an area code for your return fax.

Jerry Valladares (PO Box 61000, New Orleans LA 70161) has the following mint CD soundtracks for sale: (1) Moon Over Parador (Jarre), $35.00. (2) Time After Time (Röza), $20.00. (3) Midnight Run (Elfman), $25.00. (4) Crimes of Passion (Wakeman), $15.00. (5) Stand and Deliver (Safan), $15.00. Wanted: Used and promo CD soundtracks of any type of music (score or various). •

FILM SCORE

MARKETPLACE

Sound clips from Pelham and Deadfall available at <http://www.filmscoremonthly.com/retrograde.html>

New from Retrograde Records!

John Barry's Deadfall

First time on CD! John Barry scored this 1968 Bryan Forbes thriller in the midst of his most creative period of the '60s. It features his 14-minute guitar concerto, "Romance for Guitar and Orchestra," performed by Renata Terrago and the London Philharmonic; the title song "My Love Has Two Faces" performed by Shirley Bassey ("Goldfinger"), plus two never-before-heard alternate versions of same (male vocal and instrumental); and vintage, dramatic Barry underscore. Deadfall was released on a Fox LP at the time of the film's release and has been unavailable ever since. Liner notes by Jon Burlingame.

$16.95

Limited Quantities Still Available!

The Taking of Pelham One Two Three

David Shire's classic '70s 12-tone jazz/funk for the 1974 subway hostage thriller. Less than 50 copies of the First Edition remain!

$16.95

Soundtracks on Compact Disc Price Guide

by Robert L. Smith
 Less than 25 copies of the First Edition remain!
 Has titles, catalog numbers and prices for over 1500 CDs 1985-1994.

$19.95

RETROGRADE RECORDS

You can order CDs without getting a subscription and vice versa! Cut, xerox or approximate this form:

Send Me:

- ☐ Deadfall $16.95
☐ Pelham $16.95
☐ Guide $19.95

Subtotal

Shipping: Add U.S./Canada: $3.00
 First Item, $1.50 Each Additional.
 Overseas: $5.00 1st, $3.00 e.o.

Shipping

Subscription

Total

Yes, I want to subscribe to Film Score Monthly! I have enclosed...

United States: ___$29.95 for 12 issues ___$14.95 for 6 issues
 Canada/Mexico: ___$35 for 12 issues ___$18 for 6 issues
 Rest of World ___$40 for 12 issues ___$20 for 6 issues

Visa/MasterCard accepted for international (non-U.S.) customers only—send your card #, name on card, and ex. date. Checks payable to Film Score Monthly. U.S. funds only. Shipping included in magazine subscriptions.

Name _____

Address _____

City/State/Zip _____

Film Score Monthly, 5455 Wilshire Blvd, Suite 1500, Los Angeles CA 90036-4201, USA

CDs and Price Guides shipped USPS first class/priority mail only (air mail to foreign addresses).

A Magazine of Extraordinary Magnitude

Film Score Monthly Subscription

As you may have noticed, FSM is about as easy to find on newsstands as fireworks in Southern California. Subscribe direct and save money as you get all the regular features—news, reviews, interviews, the latest release information and more—delivered to your mailbox.

Twelve Issues: $29.95

Canada/Mexico $35

Rest of World $40

MAIL BAG

Letters from Readers

How To!

...Many readers would benefit from an in-depth look at the legal aspects involved when writing music for money. As a composer this interests me as I try to "get my foot in the door." Hit the main sections that would go into a contract for recording an album, scoring a film, doing a commercial, etc. with the percentages, publishing rights, what's expected from the studio, how much it costs to hire an orchestra and record them, how much an orchestrator should receive, and so on. If I want to find people to invest in me to record an album, what sort of contract would I need?

Besides sending in my copyright forms, do I need to do anything else to cover myself? What about trademarks, artwork, etc.? How do I hire a lawyer, and how much should I expect to pay? If I want to start my own label, what do I need to know, and if I record my own album and want it mastered, what are the top 20 places to go, and how much do they cost? If I want to make my own album "exactly" (step by step) the way John Williams recorded his, how much would I need to pay and to whom?

I'm more concerned with the first-time project, the "I've been doing it for free and now I want to go pro" stages. Every story I read about bands getting signed or filmmakers going big, I never hear about the stages in-between, where they went from totally geek to totally sheik. It's as though the artists want to keep their aura and glamour so high that they don't want you to know their inside secret, or that they may have written songs for RuPaul for 20 years before they got their break.

I've read your interviews with composers, but I was basically just given an overview of how much work I'm going to face and all the reasons why I shouldn't become a composer. What I can use to my benefit is to learn what others have already overcome, and the tools they used to get to where they are right now. I'm sure that everyone would find composer's salaries as well as legal costs for doing a score interesting.

Frank McKeown
8045 Davis Dr East
St. Louis MO 63105

I would love to cover this material—and will! It's a matter of finding the people to write it. Composers Richard Bellis and Jeff Rona have each given presentations on the cost break-downs for music production. Any aspiring composer should contact the Society for Composers and Lyricists (www.filmscore.org), and see our site, www.filmscoremonthly.com, for other Internet resources.

The reason many top composers don't have stories about legal paperwork and production drudgery is because there is a vast studio "engine" to take of these things once you reach a certain level. John Williams doesn't have to oversee every step of his top-notch recordings, because he has relationships with A-level studios, engineers, orchestrators, contractors, music editors, players and many more who work with him.

The advice I can give to aspiring composers is to focus on skill and personality: your own. They say "the business" is about personal relationships, and it's true. A composer overcomes a total lack of experience by being talented, having ideas, and being an engaging person who is both ego-less and passionate. Don't worry about hiring an attorney or where to master your first album, but move to Los Angeles (really!) and work at an agency, studio or other music-prep place. Hey, go work for Hans at Media Ventures.

We'll try to have articles on "film scoring at home," but writing music for movies is different from indie filmmaking or having your own rock band, in that you need to have a movie. For that, you need to have relationships with filmmakers, and the skill is as much getting those as writing the music.

John Williams Bag

...I was raised on food and fishing and movies. Of the latter, those of the Spielberg kind. Back then, I liked Temple of Doom more than Raiders, which I liked anyway. I saw E.T. twice in the theater and never rolled my eyes or murmured biting sarcasms. And Jaws, which I watched on Beta when I was old enough, had a way of forcing me to be thirsty occasionally, so that as I drank, my eyes could be turned and my mind distracted.

The movies I loved as a child were strange and wondrous in many ways. But the images, the names, the words spoken, often owed their precious and timeless emotional impact to something that neither escaped the child's attention nor ever found his tongue: the underscore.

Looking back, I think it was the music which, for these fantastical films, a) best expressed—or represented—the quality of inexpressibility that enshrouds the memory of any affecting experience; and thereby, b) justified those hours spent living vicariously. You could go on forever relating the details of a movie and pretend to be describing something out of real life, but your second-hand account would fail to impress—as would the movie, if not for the music that gave so much to your appreciation of the story.

Until Jurassic Park, musical underscore to me had not been music as such. But with the heraldic trumpet theme that sounds as the monstrous green island approaches, I realized that I had, by invitation, entered the movie, and for the first time I wanted to understand the music's magnetism. The composer's name appeared in the end credits, and (wondering if this was the same man who wrote "The Olympic Spirit" in 1988) I there became a fan of film music... and an addict of John Williams's music. I love it like family.

Kevin McDermott
254 Powell Rd
Springfield PA 19064-2308

...I would like to respond Jonathan Hinkle (Vol. 2, No. 6). He asked if he was the only one disappointed by John Williams's recent work. No, he is not alone. I have also been underwhelmed by Mr. Williams's scores of late.

For several years, I told people that John Williams was the best at his craft. My argument was that Raiders, E.T., Superman and certainly the Star Wars Trilogy would have been much lesser movies without their respective scores. Those were so exhilarating and popular that even non-film music buffs were able to hear any of those themes and immediately recognize its movie. One might contend that this was because the films were popular. Well, so were Independence Day, Men in Black, and Ace Ventura, but those scores did not conjure up such immediate reactions.

That was the Williams of the early '80s. The late '80s gave us two very bland Williams contributions—Always and Empire of the Sun—and two repetitive and similar scores—Presumed Innocent and The Accidental Tourist. Despite the fact that these were less-than-stellar achievements, I still said Williams was the best. However, I had to wait until 1993's Schindler's List before my faith was reaffirmed. This is one of the best scores of the '90s. Unfortunately, that was the last time I raved about any of John Williams's music.

I bought Jurassic Park, Nixon and Sabrina before seeing the movies because I was such a big fan. These three left me very disappointed. Each of them has a decent theme or two, but not much else.

Not to be dismayed, I bought Sleepers last year before seeing the movie and was so let down. I will not buy any more John Williams CDs unless I see the movie first and leave the theater humming the music. And yes, I did see The Lost World and Rosewood. Those soundtracks are not part of my collection. However, I do still firmly believe that John Williams is the man to do the Star Wars prequels and will not disappoint.

Tom Vogt
3705 Brierwood Dr
Erie PA 16510

FSM NEEDS YOUR LETTERS!
Respond to a topic here, start your own—anything you want.

Mail Bag
c/o Film Score Monthly
5455 Wilshire Blvd Suite 1500
Los Angeles CA 90036-4201
mailbag@filmscoremonthly.com

Soundtrack Psycho Reactions

...I wonder if it's ever occurred to these crazy soundtrack collectors that you can buy a laserdisc copy of a lot of these movies for about the same price as the rare, limited edition soundtrack. I had the recent, brilliant insight that buying the LD of Dragonslayer would give me more entertainment than the sound-

a couple of bucks. (Auctions are fun, especially the ones that have no minimum bid. For fun, put down $1.49—you might get it!) Don't buy a disc "blind" such as all these "promos" by Lee Holdridge... I always thought promos were free. Really, how many times do you (I) listen to these? (Funny, I liked music much more when it cost less!)

score for Hoodlum, a gangster film set in the '30s. Bernstein is a legend who has done masterful scores in a multitude of genres. This film would have been a perfect opportunity for him to revisit his style of jazz-scoring that he mastered in such films as The Man with the Golden Arm, an excellent picture with a powerhouse jazz score.

classic score to Chinatown.

In closing, I would like to express my appreciation for the Airplane! quote in the last issue. How about a feature on that Bernstein score?

Peter Avellino

1771 N Vermont Ave #403

Los Angeles CA 90027

track, for less money. If people like Krull-soundtrack-hoarding "Jimmy" from the "Soundtrack Psycho Report" (Vol. 2, No. 6) did that, they'd save collectors a lot of money. However, people like "Jimmy" are probably beyond such common-sense advice.

I would never pay for a soundtrack if I knew I could buy the movie itself for about the same price, or less. The money spent on these rare, bootleg, limited edition, or promo CDs could be spent on an LD or DVD player and a bunch of movies. If you really admire a film score, why not just buy an LD or DVD of the movie so that you can study how the music functions in it? You may not be able to brag about owning 15 copies of the soundtrack, but at least you'd be educating yourself.

Andy Schmidt
263 Eigenmann Hall
Indiana University
Bloomington IN 47406

...Are some people so desperate that they'd pay $2500 for a copy of Cherry 2000? Last June in Toronto, I found Cherry for a mere $7.99, Body Heat for $7.99, Flesh + Blood for $8.50. Oh, yeah, saw a copy of Raggedy Man for $7.50 or so. And about a dozen more like that.

The fun of buying music is the listening, not trying to see if you can sell it. Try watching the film first, to see if you actually like the music. And if you like it, see if you can buy the album for

For your further education, look for soundtrack-related "studio" albums. For example, if you dig Andre Previn in a serious mode (Dead Ringer, Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse), look for the many Columbia LPs with Previn at the piano with his orchestra, or Johnny Williams. Study the sidemen on those dates, and you could wind up with some Shelly Manne or Red Mitchell records. Same goes for the personnel with Henry Mancini.

I occasionally (try to) downsize my collection. It's far easier to get a few bucks (or credit) than to try and milk a cash cow dry. If I want to make some serious dough, I'll look for a Picasso at a garage sale.

Guy McKone
187 Wellington St
Stratford, Ontario N5A 2L7
Canada

The Bold and the Bad

...L.A. Confidential provides Jerry Goldsmith with the best film he's had to work with in a while and he definitely lives up to it: a serious, mature score for a serious, mature film that also succeeds as interesting music. (In the Bizarro World, they are currently enjoying a CD which is mostly score, interspersed with a few songs.) But it seems that too many recent scores have continued the trend of not wanting to affect the film in one way or another.

Case in Point: Elmer Bernstein's

Hoodlum as a film was hampered by inherent flaws in the script and overlength. It obviously aspired to Godfather-type levels, but you know something is wrong when the time-going-by montage makes you think instead of Dick Tracy. The score features Griesters-type mood cues, unmemorable underscore and a love theme which sounded suspiciously like the one in Airplane!

This film needed to move and Bernstein's score doesn't let it do that. If someone attempted to do something the equivalent of The Man with the Golden Arm score today, would it be used, no matter how good it was?

An interesting example of what wasn't done in Hoodlum can be found in the unused main title for The Two Jakes featured on the recent Van Dyke Parks promo CD. This is the sort of insane, Franz Waxman-ish piece that could probably never be done today unless the film were a parody—that's probably why it was cut. After the title music, the music evolves into a bouncy rhythm representing post-war L.A. Jake Gittes is fat, successful and has put the tragedy of his past behind him. The themes have a more mature, knowing form, consistent with what has happened to Jake Gittes: he has grown to care about something again. Unfortunately, this is much clearer on CD than in the film, which is muddled but not uninteresting. Definitely an interesting companion to Jerry Goldsmith's

I also found Hoodlum oddly subdued, and for that matter so was Goldsmith's economical score to L.A. Confidential. The problem is that few people today have the balls to make a film that could work with up-front music (not to criticize L.A. Confidential, which is excellent). But, check out U-Turn for a great new Ennio Morricone score, which is forthright and definitely weird without sacrificing sophistication.

Facts of Collecting Life

...I began collecting soundtracks in 1970, accidentally, with the purchase of United Artists' Great Western Themes: a collection of original soundtrack main titles (Big Country, Magnificent Seven, Scalphunters, etc.) that was, and still is, pretty invigorating listening. Problem is, 28 years is hard on an LP.

When CDs came along I sought to replace the vinyl as each title became available, and that led to subscribing to FSM. I am out of my salary range most of the time, but I enjoy reading what those more sophisticated in their listening have to say. "Is it art?" is good for discussion. As for listening, if I like it, I listen to it.

Finally Patton arrives on CD, free of the legal morass of who sold what label to whom, and Mr. Buzan's review (Vol. 2, No. 6) basically says, "It's great music except for the sound!" Oops. Is that like great food except for the taste?

Count me one of those who goes absolutely nuts when Christopher Palmer or even the composer does an "original" soundtrack—sort of, almost, like it was originally recorded. Aarrgh!

Just a wish, and I know it'll never come true for all of the reasons your magazine has written: just one digital remastering of the original score. Then let the artists, arrangers and conductors teach me anything they want. To mitigate the notion I am a total boob, the irrational sensitivity to note-for-note CD soundtrack re-releases did inspire some illumination in my thinking: the world of classical music must be very interesting, looking for a Mozart equivalent of the original (soundtrack) recording. Education in that music must be a real source of frustration, looking for satisfactory recordings, arrangements, orchestras, etc.

If I like it, I'll buy it. Rather like standing at the magazine rack thumbing through for articles or photos of interest. When technology allows listening to soundtracks without necessarily buying blind or seeing the film on tape, oh boy. By then maybe there will be Soundtracks Anonymous.

Tom Hanson
4249 Beard Avenue South
Minneapolis MN 55410

The ideal situation is to have a film score available in both the original recording and a variety of interpretations. As for technology allowing soundtrack "previews," check out the Internet for music samples you can download to decide what to purchase. On FSM's web site, we have sound clips from our Retrograde releases, The Taking of Pelham One Two Three and Deadfall.

...Why does it seem like there are no female film score fans? For that matter, no film score fans under 25? Just curious! I'd really like to hear your thoughts on this!

John Tatler
62 Willoughbreath
Falmouth VA 22405

My speculation is that for younger collectors, soundtracks are a part of genre-movie fandom (comic books, models, videogames) which is traditionally male-dominated. For older collectors, it's like fishing or baseball card collecting—again, more of a male hobby.

Remembering Tony Thomas

...An interviewer once asked Archibald Leach how he managed to re-invent himself into one of the most admired movie idols of his time. Mr. Leach, who became the personification of debonair leading men as Cary Grant, replied that he simply imagined the type of fellow he most admired and then did his best to become that man.

Tony Thomas loved movies and the people involved in making them. He wasn't content to keep his enthusiasm to himself but dedicated his life to interviewing his idols, broadcasting the results on Canadian radio, and writing an extraordinary number of books for Citadel Press' legendary The Films of... series. The film that changed his life was The Adventures of Robin Hood with Errol Flynn. He co-authored the book on Flynn and produced the vinyl recording of the Erich Korngold score as preserved from a radio broadcast of musical excerpts conducted by the composer with narration by Basil Rathbone. Side two of the record contained the last interview with Flynn before his death at age 50. It is both poignant and revealing in that Flynn comes across as a sort of modern-day Ulysses, scorning the fates who betrayed him, yet still full of hope despite the ravages of alcohol and drugs that would bring about his end.

Tony did not imagine himself to be Errol Flynn, though that actor's roles as the definitive swashbuckler no doubt provided a source of perpetual joy. Tony produced the album to that actor's last really good film, The Adventures of Don Juan, a funny send-up of Flynn's own screen image featuring one of Max Steiner's best works. (It was later used to camp up George Hamilton's dual role in Zorro, the Gay Blade.)

I met Tony for the first time at the home of Max Steiner in Beverly Hills in 1978. I had recently relocated to sunny L.A. and was invited to an informal dinner party hosted by Lee, Max's widow. Al Bender and his wife were there along with composer/scholar John Morgan. I had done some cover illustrations for Al's Max Steiner Journal and begun chronicling the career of Miklós Rózsa on audio and film as a student at Diablo Valley College in Pleasant Hill, California. Tony was handsome enough to have been an actor himself; his baritone voice (which can be heard on the recording of Rózsa's The Vintner's Daughter) would confirm this, but he seemed content to write and produce. The highlight of the party would often be listening to some new recording of music by Max or Erich that Tony had just produced. Tony wrote lyrics to Steiner's love theme for Flynn and Olivia de Havilland in their last film together, They Died with Their Boots On. These were limited edition items labeled "not for public sale" and have since become valuable collector's items.

Once I got a call from Tony to do the typesetting for a 2LP set of Steiner's Bird of Paradise. I designed a logo for his Medallion label and did the artwork for Music for Westerns (Steiner again). Both were produced by Lesley Anderson and Mike Snell of New York. I remember going to Tony's home in Glendale when the TV was on and we listened silently to Jerry Goldsmith's main title to Rio Conchos. I had brought a proposed layout for Hans Salter's Scarlet Street, featuring my own painting of Joan Bennett, the film's star. Ms. Bennett was still then living and Tony felt my rendering did not flatter her enough and opted to use a black-and-white glamour still instead. He was a perfectionist and put forth his argument with such charm that you'd end up agreeing with him. He also brought the music of Herbert Stothart out of mothballs when he produced a 2LP set containing the music from the original M-G-M Mutiny on the Bounty, Viva Villa, Anna Karenina, etc. My favorite of these productions was the release of original music masters to Rózsa's The Lost Weekend, containing the composer's three alternate finales.

Polly Jo Baker, Gregg Nestor, Albert Dominguez and Dan Robbins are but a few of the many talents Tony helped nurture in his recordings. He never had the funds to produce the large-scale, fully orchestrated re-recordings pioneered by George Korngold and Charles Gerhardt, but he achieved much with little. His first book on film composers, Music for the Movies, contains interviews, candid photos, and probably the first extensive discography of movie music then assembled.

I last saw Tony at the memorial for his friend Miklós Rózsa two years ago at the Hotel Bel-Air. He had aged so little in the intervening 17 years that it came as a complete surprise when Dan Robbins called to inform me of his death on July 8 at age 69. He had been working on a new Alfred Newman CD to include suites from The Razor's Edge, The Robe, The Greatest Story Ever Told and The Diary of Anne Frank.

Tony Thomas lived a full life and was generous to share his many interests with the rest of us. He was a sure and thorough documentarian in all his writing. He preserved the thoughts and reminiscences of everybody from Francis X. Bushman to Walt Disney and pioneered the release of film music on record when it was far from being fashionable or even profitable. His books on the films of Twentieth Century Fox, The Great Adventure Films and of celebrities too numerous to mention will help educate future students. We can all be thankful that he became the very special person that he was.

James "Pav" Pavelek
PO Box 71045
San Jose CA 94086

...Tony Thomas was a man whose love of film music shone through like a bright beacon. His wonderful work on future CDs, alas, will no longer be there. As worldwide representative of the long-established Max Steiner Film Music Society, may I say that Tony Thomas and Max Steiner were very close friends over many years.

It was Tony who interviewed Max on two occasions in the Steiner home. These tapes are in The Steiner Collection. It was also due to Tony, through Citadel Records, that so many of Max's private collection of film scores were produced on LP, expressly for our society members worldwide. Our membership will never forget Tony's warm tribute to Max after the granddaddy of film music died: "I shall forever be grateful that God made me a Max Steiner fan. My life would be much poorer without him."

www.filmscoremonthly.com
Visit our web site for a weekly "E-Mail Bag" as part of the daily content.

Sadly, Tony has been taken from us. Tony, your great work lives on and long may it do so, but we are all still going to miss you badly.

Brian A. Reeve
The Max Steiner Film Music Society
1 Rotherwood Road, Putney
London SW15 1 LA
England

See Vol. 2, No. 6 for our Tony Thomas memorial coverage, and visit the FSM web site (URL above, articles section) for additional eulogies by Preston Jones, John Morgan and Andrea Thomas (Tony's daughter). •

CDs $6 EACH

Patrick Doyle
Indochine
Carillo's Way

Jerry Goldsmith
Air Force One
Planet of the Apes (Intrada)
QBVI
Bandolero! (Intrada)
Leviathan
The Russia House
Matinee
Warlock
Rambo III (complete, Intrada)
Basic Instinct
First Blood
Alien
Hour of the Gun
Islands in the Stream
Rio Conchos
Star Trek: Voyager ("Care-taker" by Jay Chattaway)

Papillon
Angle
The Shadow
Congo
Outland/Capricorn One
Bad Girls
The Wind and the Lion
Forever Young
MacArthur
Not Without My Daughter
Star Trek: First Contact Chinatown
The Blue Max (Sony)

Alex North
2001 (cond. J. Goldsmith)

Basil Poledouris
Lonesome Dove
The Hunt for Red October
RoboCop

Quigley Down Under
The Blue Lagoon

John Williams
1941 (Bay Cities)
The Cowboys
Born on the 4th of July
Nixon
Home Alone 2
The Empire Strikes Back (Varèse)
Far and Away
The Reivers (Sony)
JFK
Empire of the Sun
Jurassic Park
Lost World: Jurassic Park
Schindler's List

Christopher Young
Hellbound: Hellraiser II
Invaders from Mars
Bat 21
The Dark Half
Jennifer 8
Cinema Septet ($12) (2CDs)
Def Con 4 ($4)
Rapid Fire ($4)
Flowers in the Attic ($4)
Hider in the House ($4)
The Vagrant ($4)
Bright Angel ($3)

James Horner ($4 each)
The Pelican Brief
Legends of the Fall
Braveheart
An American Tail
Searching for Bobby Fischer

Various - $5 for all 5 CDs*
Shining Through (Kamen)
Philadelphia (Shore)
The Client
Immortal Beloved Salute to Hollywood (Williams w/ Boston Pops)

Out of Print CDs
(for trade only)
Runaway (Goldsmith)
Wind (Poledouris)
Species (Young, promo)

CD Wanted
Baby's Day Out (Broughton)
(will trade two of the above titles or buy)

Laserdiscs for Sale
Army of Darkness ($8) LBX
The Boys from Brazil ($5)
Young Guns 2 ($7) LBX
Logan's Run ($8) LBX
Clear and Present Danger ($8) LBX
Capricorn One ($5)
Rambo: First Blood Part II ($7) LBX
Cobra ($8) LBX

Shipping Rates
(for both CDs and LDs)
First Class (Priority): $3.50 first CD, .25 each additional 4th Class: $2.00 first CD, .10 each additional
* "Various" CDs count only as one CD in shipping rates ($3.50 for first class or $2.00 4th class, but not .25 or .10 as "additional" CD rates).

Make Checks or Money Orders Payable to:

CHRIS SHANEYFELT
1920 E 2ND #2208
EDMOND OK 73034

This brave new guide reviews 2,000 soundtracks

No serious soundtrack collector should be without this groundbreaking guide. Didier C. Deutsch leads a team of industry experts in reviewing the quality and content of 2,000 soundtrack CDs, including the genius of Bernard Herrmann, Miklos Rózsa, Elmer Bernstein, James Horner and Basil Poledouris. Foreword by Film Score Monthly editor Lukas Kendall.

VideoHound's® Soundtracks • Didier C. Deutsch • October 1997 paperback with music CD • ISBN 1-57859-025-6 • $24.95 U.S.

Available at these fine stores:

Drama Book Shop Inc.
723 7th Avenue
New York, NY 10019
Tel: 212/944-0595

Samuel French Theatre & Film Bookshops
11963 Ventura Blvd
Studio City, CA 90046
Tel: 818/762-0535

Samuel French Theatre & Film Bookshops
7623 Sunset Blvd.
Hollywood, CA 90046
Tel: 213/876-0570

Stage Step
(Mail Order Only)
Philadelphia, PA 19130
Tel: 215/636-9000

Or call Visible Ink Press at 1-800-776-6256

Need Blank Media & Studio Supplies Fast?

We deliver to your door!

CALL 818.562.6527

When you're in the middle of a project, the last thing you want to worry about is running out of tape. Recorded Media Supply is here for you. Just give us a call and we'll deliver your products right away.

215 W. Palm Ave. Suite 104 • Burbank, CA 91502

- Fast friendly service
- Knowledgeable staff
- Visit our catalog on-line
- Free delivery in the Los Angeles area

We carry a full line of Quantegy professional audio media products for all your recording needs.

RECORDED MEDIA SUPPLY

visit our website
www.blankmedia.com

The Men with the Junk Metal Instruments

The Cambridge, Massachusetts based Alloy Orchestra writes new scores to silent film classics—which they perform live to picture.

by JONATHAN FOLLETT

The lights dim in Boston's Coolidge Corner Theater as the tick-tock, tick-tock sound of clock-like percussion marches through the air. Dziga Vertov's silent film classic, The Man with a Movie Camera, begins. On the screen, theatergoers drift into an auditorium filled with folding chairs and a projectionist fiddles with the reels of an uncooperative camera.

A playful melodic theme grows out of the clock-like sound while the celluloid people sit down and wonder impatiently if the show will ever start. Fortunately, the projectionist discovers the problem and the film-within-a-film starts to roll. Director Vertov, in one graceful gesture, has made his viewers aware that the carefully constructed film world surrounding them is nothing more than a fantasy. A quick glance to the right of the Coolidge Corner screen destroys another illusion and reveals Vertov's partners in crime: the Alloy Orchestra, a trio from Cambridge, Massachusetts is providing a living film score.

Imagine composer Sergei Rachmaninoff playing ambient music with experimental industrial band Einstürzende Neubauten and you might have a close approximation of the sound of the Alloy Orchestra. Alloy's unusual sonic palette is the result of their unique lineup: two percussionists and a synthesizer player. Keyboardist Caleb Sampson uses orchestral patches like woodwinds, harps, pianos and strings, as well as strange noises like blips, bleeps and the occasional siren. Ken Winokur and Terry Donahue, Alloy's percussionists, use "found" junk metal instruments—pieces of pipe, truck springs, an empty fire extinguisher—alongside traditional percussion to create a near limitless variety of sounds.

Terry explains the cosmic obligation of all drummers to play whatever they can get their hands on. "I think almost every kid who plays drums plays pots and pans when they're little.

Then, once they get real drums they outgrow them. Ken and I both separately started playing junk percussion. Ken was living in France for awhile, making his living playing music in the subways and he couldn't afford a drum. So, he was playing on a couple of frying pans. Finally, he got enough money to buy a drum and people stopped giving him money. So, he realized there was a future in frying pans."

Terry's own experience with "found" metal instruments was a little different. "I was playing as a second percussionist in rock bands and funk bands and I just liked the sound of metal tubes and pipes. For one thing, they were loud enough that they didn't need to be amplified and could still stand up to a drum kit, whereas a lot of the other percussion got lost. And the whole industrial thing started coming. So, it really seemed to fit in."

Ken and Terry were both part of the Boston based percussion outfit Concussion Ensemble before they joined Alloy. "Ken and Caleb were putting together this Alloy Orchestra for New Year's Eve and asked me if I would go in with them," says Terry. "We figured that we would play a couple of live shows and that would be the end of it—a little side project."

Fortunately, David Kleiler, the program director of Boston's Coolidge Corner Theater saw one of their performances. "He wanted to show Metropolis [at the Coolidge] but really hated the Giorgio Moroder score that was added in '85. So, he asked us if we could come up with something." Alloy scored Metropolis, receiving rave reviews from the Boston press, and from there, the group took off. Since 1992, they've scored nine films and played all over the world at such prestigious events as the Telluride Film Festival and the Pordenone Silent Film Festival in Italy. They've recently begun work with Turner Classic Movies, scoring The Unknown, which they hope to premiere in Boston this year. Alloy has also released several albums. Their CD New Music for Silent Films (Accurate Records) includes pieces from five of the movies they've scored, including Metropolis and Aelita, Queen of Mars. Their latest effort, Lonesome (BIB Records), contains music from the movie of the same name.

While both CDs provide a satisfying glimpse into the Alloy Orchestra's music, it is their live show that makes them truly incredible. On the Coolidge Corner screen, The Man with a Movie Camera continues to move at a ferocious tempo and Alloy's music matches it perfectly...

Vertov edits scenes from everyday Russian city life into an oftentimes confusing collage. The images are a fantastic mix of both the beautiful and the horrible: the human experience from birth to death. The Man with a Movie Camera moves in waves, building into a thunderous peak. In one scene, as a train comes roaring towards a man on the tracks, the Alloy Orchestra mimics the sound of the locomotive using a steadily building snare. The snare sound explodes as the train nearly hits the man. The synchronicity between the players and the film is astounding. Split-second cuts between scenes make timing the music precarious, but Alloy manages to pull it off with astounding precision.

Dziga Vertov's The Man with a Movie Camera (1929)

Terry explains how Alloy is able to achieve this seemingly effortless communication between the film and the music. "There's great chemistry between the three of us," says Terry. "We're all very sensitive to the films and very sensitive to each other. So, we feed off each other very nicely and the film conducts us. Every other group that I've seen do it basically plays music that seems separate. So, you're watching a movie and you're almost distracted by the band or you watch the band and you're distracted by the film. We try to sync it up."

The synchronicity of the live performance begins with a lot of hard, sometimes tedious

Sometimes you think of something on the spot and it sticks and it's there every time since then. Other times you kind of wander around and don't really know what you're going to get."

Terry shares some of Alloy's film composition techniques. "We use themes that we've already used before. For example, the pretty girl will have her theme and that will repeat. I think that's a great tool for getting people involved, isn't surprising that Alloy will use anything and everything to create the effect they're looking for. "We aren't afraid to use tapes," Terry says. "We wondered about that when we first started. 'Do we want to use anything recorded? What the hell, nothing can stop us.' Our initial impulse was that we should be able to do it all live and then we thought, 'C'mon, this is the '90s, ya know? You don't have to if you don't want to.' So in Metropolis we use a couple drum machine things. It's all very mechanical, kind of chugging along and it seems to work well. In The Man with a Movie Camera, we use a lot of noise sound effects."

Writing music for Vertov's film brought its share of surprises for the Alloy Orchestra. "When we first started scoring The Man with a Movie Camera we got the filmmaker's initial notes. This was the cue sheet that he gave his first composer, which had been lost since then. At first, the people at the George Eastman House, who got us the print [of the film], said they had found a score. Our reaction was, 'What do we want with a score? We write our own.' We looked at it and it wasn't a score. It was a cue sheet, which was perfect. Once you see the film you'll see how, without a cue sheet, it can just ramble on. So, the cue sheet was great. It said things like, 'I want a charging rhythm here. I want noise.'" work in the studio. "We get a video copy of a film and we sit down in our studio and watch the tape. The first time we watch it through we sit there with notebooks and jot down ideas, largely for theme changes and mood changes; also, for me and Ken, what kind of junk we're going to use in the show and for Caleb what [synthesizer] sounds he's thinking of using."

Alloy Orchestra photo by Ken Winokur & James Walker

If Alloy's creative process to this point sounds regimented, it's only because they've just gotten started. "The second time through usually we throw the paper away, just start playing and whoever comes up with something first, the others will play along," Terry explains. "We record it and say, 'How did that work with the scene?' If it worked and we're all sure, then we leave it and move on. If we're not sure, we'll put down a couple of other ideas for that scene and see which one really worked. We go through the film that way, scene by scene."

How much of a part does improvisation play in the actual performance? "It's in there. Mostly, it's pretty scored out. Again, the film dictates where things definitely have to be, but there's a lot of places in the middle of that where we can take off and do what we want to do. It used to be a more major part when we first were doing it because we would write the scores a lot quicker and kind of go by the seat of our pants. But, now there's a little more at stake, so we score them out a little more. Again, within each film there's places where we can all take off a little bit, but we know we're going to because they get familiar with [the theme]. By the second or the third time they hear it, it's something they know. People want that, kind of need that, something they've heard before." And that's what the Alloy Orchestra tries to do: connect the audience to the film through their music.

"We don't look at silent film like an old medium. We look at it like a piece of art that is happening right now and we write music accordingly. Sometimes that piece of art makes us play something that sounds older. But, for the most part, we look at it scene by scene and see how it makes us feel."

According to Terry, it takes Alloy anywhere from a weekend to a week to write the music and anywhere from a month to three to put it all together, depending on their schedule. "Getting the timings—knowing how long a scene is going to be and how to get out of it gracefully and get into the next thing and timing all the sound effects—that's where the actual hard work is."

The addition of sound effects adds another dimension to the Alloy Orchestra's music. "95% of the sound effects are live, done by Ken or myself. There are exceptions. Caleb sampled a lion for the lion scene in The Lost World. [Not the new movie, kids. -LK] It surprises people because you hear the music and everything's going live and all of a sudden you hear a sampled lion and a sampled monkey. But mostly the gunshots me or Ken will do on the snare drum, or the explosions on a bass drum and a gong."

With such a variety of sounds required, it

Director Dziga Vertov was also a noise musician. In one scene from The Man with a Movie Camera, a man is shown playing a washboard, a tin plate, wine bottles and spoons on a table. "So we set up the same thing," Terry says. "Ken has this whole set-up with this table and when you see that, you actually hear it. We use some radio sound effects and we put together some tapes to keep the mood that was originally intended for the film."

Staying true to a director's intentions is something that the Alloy Orchestra wants to maintain, while, at the same time, expressing their own unique musical vision. Terry explains the philosophy behind the group's live performance: "We set up to the side of the screen so we're not a hindrance to the viewing of the film. We want people to watch the film and forget we're there, which is sometimes hard, because it's live and it's a little louder than a film usually is. And, a lot of people say they like to watch us more than the film. But, for the most part, we want people to watch the film, forget we're there and look up an hour and a half later and say, 'Wow. These guys have been playing along the whole time and it seemed like it really belonged.'"

As The Man with a Movie Camera concludes and the lights in the Coolidge Corner Theater are raised to reveal the three musicians, it's plain from the audience's applause that the Alloy Orchestra has met its goal: the music belongs.

The Final Confrontation: Zimmer vs. FSM

Hans Zimmer is one of the most successful film composers today. FSM's editors have picked on him for his style and practices. Suddenly, they found themselves in the same room...

by Lukas Kendall & Jeff Bond

Last issue, Hans Zimmer and music editor Adam Smalley debated with FSM's Lukas Kendall and Jeff Bond on the aesthetics of contemporary scoring, the fairness of a few past FSM reviews, and the allegations of a "factory" environment at Zimmer's Media Ventures. Aw, heck, you really have to see the last issue to know what's going on.

When we left off, we were discussing contemporary action films with pounding scores.

Hans Zimmer: In The Rock, in the one big chunk I did write, I actually went against my judgment and moralized something, when all the guys get killed and cut down. I wanted to make it tragic and say it was fucked up.

Jeff Bond: That's one of the best cues in the score.

Hans: But after that where do you go? Crimson Tide is morally ambiguous all the way through; every character at least gets to do some soul-searching. Tony [Scott] is a master at making people look heroic and beautiful. Even with all of the big, macho guys he managed to get humanity into those characters, certainly Gene Hackman, when he knows he's wrong. There's a difference between Broken Arrow and Crimson Tide.

Adam Smalley: Back to subtext, it's naive to think that there's so much influence. Composing is a very lonely job, working for weeks on a movie, and all you have is subtext. The problem-solving aspect is integral to it, and I've seen Hans watch a movie and musically analyze and describe a character better than the director did. It's all about subtext in a lot of these movies.

Hans: There's a scene in Peacemaker where George Clooney and Nicole Kidman are on a plane talking to each other. A short scene, like 30 seconds. I was on this fucker for two days trying to make it work. It took me so long to figure out what it was: Clooney's eyes always commit. He looks straight into the camera, straight into her eyes. And she, even with her body language at one point, backs away from him looking at her, and her eyes don't commit. So when I wrote something strong it just made her look untruthful. It became really tough, and I'd sit down with the director. She'd say, "Why doesn't this work?" And I'd say, "Look into her eyes, look into her eyes: that's why it doesn't work."

Sometimes the director doesn't even notice it. You go into incredible detail solving some of these problems, because again, these are supposed to be two characters of equal strength. And what I did ultimately, which you will probably not like, is the bad guy gets the most heart-felt tune, and then Clooney, who after all is our hero, gets the same tune as the immoral Russian general, because that way I could give them equal strength.

Jeff: Actually that sounds very interesting to me. I like the idea of that ambiguity.

Hans: I mean, your criticism about all action movies sounding the same, I completely buy that, actually. The action scores seem to have that sound to it.

Lukas Kendall: To think that in 1966, when they would do whatever an action movie was at the time, they would get Jerry Goldsmith or Leonard Rosenman, Lalo Schifrin, John Barry, Ennio Morricone, Elmer Bernstein, and you could not possibly confuse them.

Hans: Maybe the jazz group [you could confuse]. Even Jerry had a go at that. But the guy who did it better than anyone else was Quincy Jones, with In the Heat of the Night and In Cold Blood. I mean, who was the first guy to start the jazz stuff?

Jeff: Alex North and Elmer Bernstein were the first big ones.

Hans: And then Henry Mancini, but his stuff was so witty. Unless you were as witty as he was, you couldn't do it. You didn't have a chance in hell; you can't rip that stuff off.

[Lukas waxes poetic about John Barry.]

Hans: I love John Barry. The Quiller Memorandum is one of the great scores for me. I don't like Born Free. Just because it's a hit doesn't make it good. I did Power of One, and the first thing the director said was he wanted Out of Africa. I said, "Get John Barry." I said I had an idea that I wanted to do something different, which was use the voices.

You know, no one starts out to make a bad movie. Shit happens. I worked on I'll Do Anything. You have to—and your readers have to—give us license to fuck up. Me trying to reinvent something for Broken Arrow and it not working has to do with the fact that there wasn't enough substance in the movie for me to do it. John Woo's subtext got thrown out of the movie. Broken Arrow became Face/Off. That's what he was trying to do in Broken Arrow with the fight on the train, the fight between good and evil.

Lukas: I liked what John Powell did.

Hans: I've known him since he was a kid. John used to do commercials, and he would get asked to do Backdraft, and he would play it for me and say, "Hey, I can do your Backdraft." I would say good, now do your own.

Hans Zimmer

Everyone is influenced by someone; I'm influenced by Morricone all the time. Why not? But there has to be an evolution; there can't always be a revolution.

Don't I wish Driving Miss Daisy was the revolution? Hey, let's score all movies like that. It would have been fine. The reason I stayed away from the Rain Man thing was I'd done it. In the action movies, you try to find something new to say and it doesn't always work. So you use what works: the adrenaline stuff. It serves the film.

Lukas: But we find ourselves feeling hollow afterwards.

Jeff: Just us two. America is satisfied.

Problem Solving

Hans: I know one thing about any composer today, and that is that they're sitting there with this film in front of them and they have no idea what they're going to do, and the only thing you can do is sit there and open up the veins and bleed all over the page. So you can't be flippant about it. Everybody out there who's doing something sweats over it, so you can't poke fun at it. You can poke fun at Broken Arrow, all right? I'll be the first one to agree with you. The Rock is a far more serious problem because I felt we got into such a corner on that one. I think Crimson Tide is good.

Lukas: I didn't like [Crimson Tide] at the time but I appreciate it now.

Hans: Part of it is that you're not always supposed to like it.

Lukas: Well, I didn't.

Adam: But you can print that you didn't like it; what makes your opinion more valuable?

Hans: No no no. I think it's fair to say I don't like it, just as it's fair for me to say I don't like something. But you need to acknowledge the work, that these aren't just random things tossed off in five minutes.

Lukas: When I saw Crimson Tide I felt there were these very broad themes underwater that I didn't want; I wanted to hear the sound of the sub. It felt like an extra element I didn't need.

Hans: Part of it is you don't realize how much of the sub I was. Part of it is I do write things that are not necessarily likable at first. On Rain Man they kept testing it and thought they had a problem because people didn't like Tom Cruise? Why? Because he's mean to Dustin Hoffman. Well that's the story.

Lukas: We like movies that are ambiguous like that; god help us if The Elephant Man ended with him living.

become: the musicals of today. What I loved about Face/Off, in the actual face-off sequence, the operation, people applauded at the end of it. Not because it was a loud action scene, but because it was beautifully crafted filmmaking.

Lukas: In Contact, there's this really huge explosion halfway through, that you're not expecting, but it's really spectacular. After it was over, people applauded, like golf.

Jeff: What was great about Face/Off was that there are action sequences, but what people remember is the story and how the characters interact.

Hans: Because it's an incredibly ambiguous story, and I like that. The first time I listened to John's music for the operation sequence, it was when he played me the scene. After it was over he said, "What did you think?" and I was like, "I didn't hear anything!" I was just watching. He was blasting me with it and I got so drawn into the images.

Ask Hans

Lukas: How do you think we should improve the magazine?

Hans: Get composers to answer questions honestly. There's a huge misconception I think that is self-inflicted by most composers, that it's all just a blast and that only the studio is the enemy and stuff. The actual process of writing a piece of music is really interesting and a very human process, and everything that happens in these movies, emotionally, happens during the composing process to us on a daily basis. You take on the emotions of the characters, which is not always a good thing. We become very fragile while we write.

This is the last place on earth where we have the budget to pay the musicians well. And by the way, everybody keeps saying I use all these electronic things. My orchestra's as big as anybody else's is. I can't see the difference between a synthesizer and a cello; I don't hear them as an orchestral color. That may be a deficiency on my part but that's what I grew into.

Hans: The best score I think as far as really trying something different was for I'll Do Anything, and who's seen that? It was really different and really crafty but it made sense. If I told you how I wrote that...

Lukas: Soundtrack fans tend to key into a very specific kind of movie and you can watch the signature over the years. It's been Gone with the Wind, The Big Country, Ben-Hur, Star Wars...

Hans: Just think about John Williams. I remember people telling me that all John Williams does is the big epic.

Lukas: Which is so untrue.

Jeff: We were just listening to Images, which is an incredible, bizarre little score. Or Jane Eyre is great.

Lukas: The best composers contribute to all sorts of films and they reinvent themselves for each genre. A Morricone or a Herrmann...

Hans: The thing is, you get fashionable. I thought after Rain Man my career was over; then I thought after Black Rain my career was over. You can only remain fashionable for so long and then you have to reinvent yourself. Right now for better or for worse I have done a lot of action movies, and maybe the ones I did that weren't action movies didn't get noticed. Something to Talk About, there isn't an electronic thing in sight.

Jeff: That's another thing; I think on action films, people think more about the technical aspects and they take everything, including the music, more into account. When a comedy is successful nobody says, "Man, what a great score," they say, "Man, isn't Jim Carrey hilarious?" Even though the music may contribute a great deal...

Hans: Well, nowadays on comedies you try to get in a few notes between the songs. I think The Producers is one of the great all-time scores. One of the great cinematic moments is when he's on the fountain; with the music it's brilliant. But that's not what we do any more. When Harry Met Sally, was there even a score in that?

"Any composer today is sitting there with this film in front of them and they have no idea what they're going to do. The only thing you can do is sit there and open up the veins and bleed all over the page. So you can't poke fun at it."

Hans: The trickiest thing on Crimson Tide was there was a tendency to glorify the army, and I didn't want to do that. It's not even a moral choice. It's a boring choice. Air Force One for me is a difficult movie to watch, but Jerry [Goldsmith] for better or worse built in so much patriotism on top of what's already in the movie that it's not believable, or not of this time.

Jeff: I think a lot of the movie is extremely unbelievable. Cartoon.

Lukas: This is my idea: Die Hard: The Musical.

Hans: That's really what these movies have

Part of the problem I get from reading the magazine myself is I feel that you guys are typecasting me. I'm the guy who wrote Thelma and Louise which has nothing to do with Nine Months which has nothing to do with House of the Spirits which has nothing to do with Regarding Henry.

Jeff: Another thing we soundtrack geeks fall into is that the only movies we pay attention to on first release are these blockbuster movies. Then months later I'll watch some drama or comedy on video with my wife.

Lukas: I think the problem is that today there are two types of movies: action movies and comedies.

Jeff: Even something like Pretty Woman which is romantic and a huge success, it has a beautiful love theme by James Newton Howard that is never heard on the album and people just forget about it.

Lukas: The exception seems to be comedies about the president, like The American President or Dave. Comedy movies, they don't have a score, and Basic Instinct movies have become action movies. Science fiction movies have become action movies. Traditional who-done-its have become action movies, because everything ends with a chase.

Hans: What about Seven?

Lukas: That's the exception, and it was great.

Adam: Or Fifth Element.

Hans: I liked that movie, because I'm sitting there and I'm waiting for the great science fiction movie to start, and suddenly I realize it's all tongue-in-cheek. All the Blade Runner references, everything. Okay, so it cost $100 million to make and Monty Python would have done it cheaper.

Jeff: I think it's a very French movie.

Lukas: People here were like, "What is this?"

Hans: But on the other hand, isn't it a more honest movie? You know the good guy's going to win. There's no pretense about it.

Jeff: I think it is interesting that it's an intentionally slight $100 million movie.

Hans: Well, what would you rather see the money spent on? $100 million on that, which is slight, doesn't pretend to preach and tell you anything other than have a good time, or do you want to spend $100 million on your serious action movie where everybody gets killed?

Lukas: Everybody gets killed in The Fifth Element.

Jeff: We saw Money Talks, where about 150 people are mowed down, and that's a comedy.

Lukas: Do you find that a lot of directors don't want the music to sound like a film score? Graeme Revell said he was trying to find out what this one director wanted. He plays him some orchestral music and the guy says, "No, I don't want any orchestras! I hate that; I hate orchestras!" Then he plays him something electronic and the guy says, "No, I don't want any synthesizers! I hate synthesizers!" And Graeme was like, "This kind of narrows it down..."

Jeff: He wants a couple of sticks banging together.

Lukas: On Peacemaker, did you run into that?

Hans: Well, the thing with Steven [Spielberg] is he's a big Crimson Tide fan.

Lukas: I want to send him the magazine; do you think he'd like it?

Jeff: Don't send him the issue with The Lost World, please.

Hans: Did you slag him?

Jeff: A bit. Did you see it?

Hans: No, not yet. Part of the problem is when I write, and I've been doing a lot recently, I isolate myself. I don't even try, I just can't handle any outside influence.

The thing is, I never listen to a director who tells me he doesn't want it to sound like a film score. Because I don't think he means that. He just wants to avoid the same old clichés. I got a lot of flack from Fox when I started working on Broken Arrow with that theme; they certainly didn't think that sounded like a film score, but that's what I wanted to do. That's what John Woo wanted to do. I'd rather be fired than not to get away with what I wanted to do.

Lukas: Well, you've also reached a certain critical mass in your career where you can do that.

Hans: But I always felt like that. And I used to get fired.

Lukas: Well, that's kind of the way we deal with this magazine. Certain people will not like it, but you have to be you, and we have to be us.

People are always going to respect someone who doesn't chicken out.

Hans: Sometimes I chicken out, though; sure!

Lukas: But you're cool about it.

Hans: Sometimes I don't know how to fix it. See, here's the thing: the worst thing that happens to the creative community on a movie is, you have a screening and it's not working. Something's wrong with the film. And when that happens there's always studio honchos who come up to you and say, "Well, you know how to fix it." No, I don't! "Can we have some suggestions?" And there is none forthcoming. So the only thing you can do is lock yourself up and talk it over with your friends...

Adam: And there's lots of people, there are four other guys here [at Media Ventures], composers you can talk over your problems with; you're not alone in the world.

Hans: Somehow you come up with a solution. It might not be the best solution and some of it might be unsolvable. I think Radio Flyer was unsolvable. You can throw a hundred thousand notes at that thing and it's unsolvable. Maybe someone else could do a better job, but... the same with The Rock. I did the best that I could do, but did I feel entirely passionate about it? No. And ultimately I write music for myself. You know: I like this bunch of notes, or I can live with this bunch of notes. I wasn't saying gimme gimme gimme The Rock. But I loved to do Crimson Tide. It moved me; it meant something to me. And sometimes you do things just because you want to do a certain thing. I mean, The Fan is a perfect example. The Fan is not a great movie; that's an understatement. But I got to write something that I always wanted to write. And I got to use an orchestra that no one had ever used before and I was always wondering, why can't you use 28 celli and 8 bass and nothing else?

Lukas: That's where you get into what Bernard Herrmann used to do.

Hans: Yeah. Bernard Herrmann would do it all the time. Was it appropriate to the movie? Sometimes yes, sometimes no. Psycho, that's really... did he mean it, or do we think he did it because we saw it and we liked it? Some of it comes with baggage attached. He's the only one of the old guys who I always admired. Part of it was for the notes and part of it was just for the audacity. And I think it shows in the notes. Part of it is just for the sheer brilliance of being able to use a two-note motif and making something out of it.

Zimmer is proud of Crimson Tide (above), with Denzel Washington and Gene Hackman, but makes no excuses for Broken Arrow (below), starring a very phallic John Travolta.

Lukas: He was doing Philip Glass before Glass was.

Hans: That stuff always happens. I was doing Trent Reznor 20 years ago.

Publicist: Did we talk about The Peacemaker?

Hans: Actually, I had much more fun laying into the bad reviews.

Special thanks to everybody at Media Ventures for their hospitality and apple juice, and for not skinning us alive upon arrival.

Director Paul Verhoeven and Basil Poledouris resume their RoboCop and Flesh+Blood teaming for the bloodiest, weirdest, most audacious outer space war story ever put on film: Starship Troopers. Not to watch would be... uncivilized.

BASIL'S BATTLE • f t h e BUGS

by JEFF BOND

You think fighting an interstellar war against giant alien bugs is challenging? For composer Basil Poledouris, scoring Paul Verhoeven's spectacular science fiction adventure Starship Troopers has become an endeavor that makes the movie's epic battle sequences shrink into insignificance. Poledouris began discussions with Verhoeven about scoring the film over a year and a half ago, and began actual work in March of this year. The final scoring session occurred on October 4, putting the composer's term on this picture at a staggering seven months. That's about seven times longer than most composers have to score a major action picture, but the results have been well worth the effort. Not only is Starship Troopers the mind-blowing action movie that summer 1997 never provided, but Poledouris's score is the kind of all-stops-pulled-out stunner that will have film music fans drooling for a soundtrack release.

Based on Robert Heinlein's classic science fiction novel, Starship Troopers chronicles the military careers of a group of young men and women four hundred years in the future, with mankind pitted against an insidious and terrifying army of tank-sized insects. The insects were created via some of the most spectacular computer-generated imagery yet seen on film, under the supervision of stop-motion expert Phil Tippett, the man who animated the Imperial walkers in The Empire Strikes Back and supervised the movement of dinosaurs in the original Jurassic Park. Verhoeven and Tippett have conspired to create battle sequences on a scale that has never before been seen on film: vast canyons swarm with thousands of attacking, crab-like warrior insects while vicious, wasp-like flying bugs swoop overhead and trundling, napalm-spewing "Tanker bugs" sear everything in their path.

It's a scenario that will leave every 14-year-old who sneaks into the movie richly satisfied, but you can count on writer Ed Neumeier of RoboCop and Paul Verhoeven, who helmed that film and the Schwarzenegger mind-trip Total Recall, to provide their own bizarre twist on the proceedings. While Starship Troopers seems on its surface to be a simple, Star Wars-type tale of galactic good and evil, there's a brilliant subversive angle to the movie that strips bare the fascistic underpinnings of movies like Top Gun, Rambo and even Star Wars by forcing the viewer to study the film's plot through a distorting lens of wartime propaganda.

Poledouris's blood-and-guts scoring consequently takes on a greater dimension than it might in a more traditional action picture. "There's a repressed society here that's very ordered and very structured," the composer explains. "In that sense it's really very much like the '40s, where everything was goal driven. World War II was the goal of the '40s. This is basically an attack on the human species by bugs and they have to rise to that. There's very little room for anybody deviating from what the dictates of the governmental structure of this society is. It's very militaristic and martial, but there's almost a naiveté to it at the beginning of the film. But when the bugs arrive this sort of innocence is broken almost immediately; I think in the third minute of the film."

As in RoboCop, Verhoeven interjects media clips into the action to bring an extra perspective to the story, but in this case the source of this extra viewpoint isn't commercial broadcast television, but a government propaganda broadcast called the Fed-Net. "The Fed-Net, which is the Federal Network, has its own tone, so it has its own style of score," says producer Jon Davison. "The score is more bombastic and over the top in these propaganda sequences, just as the tone of the narrator is a bit insistent and a bit heightened." The final cue of the film combines the tone of the Fed-Net cues and the underscore, "so it's still movie music but it's heightened to almost an editorial."

Underscoring the emotions of a scene is a standard requirement of film music, but in this case Poledouris's score moves organically through both deliberately artificial elements of the movie experience and the "real" scenes in the movie, begging the question of just how much we can trust the feelings this music attempts to engender.

"It's very, very sincere," Poledouris insists. "But you have to realize that there's also a very conscious, formal design at work that Paul and I have had months of thinking and talking about. Essentially it's supposed to represent an innocent approach to a futuristic world. There's a kind of a wide-eyed 'Golly!' to a lot of what takes place in the film. Hundreds of people get wiped out and it's like, well, here we go, we're going to the next planet to kill some more bugs."

"I think in that sense there's a kind of a World War II modeling in the film itself," the composer notes, "in the writing, the costumes, the weapons. It seems like the major officers are dressed up like S.S. troops. I don't think there's any association with it ideologically, but it's kind of retro in the way that 2001 was, when the pencil floats up. You know, it's 2001, and they've got pencils? I think musically it represents the same attitude, it's about propaganda. We're going to war and we're going to save our species. It is very conscious, but there's a tongue-in-cheek quality to it. That's very difficult to do, though, because there are real moments in the movie that you have to play. The love theme, for instance. I mean, to me that's a real love theme."

Playing the score straight through interruptions of Fed-Net broadcasts created its own challenge: "There's this blurring of reality. I think the only way you can approach a film score is to understand the formal dictates of what the writers have done with the script." The Fed-Net broadcasts essentially telegraph upcoming sections of the movie "in this kind of superficial manner that this is what's going on in their world today, but they have this kind of Movie-Tone News sense to them. And I scored those things very superficially."

Poledouris originally wanted to use the same motifs in the Fed-Net broadcasts as in the rest of the score, to show the dichotomy between the propaganda and the reality of the bugs. Although largely abandoned, this approach was retained for a few instances. "The whole brain bug thing, the theme when the Colonel goes up and touches the bug [at the end of the movie], the music there is from a Fed-Net where they're saying 'Are you psychic?' and they've got this girl sitting in a chair smiling and this guy comes up with a third eye that pops out. It's all very superficial, but at this moment hopefully it will become real."

The movie ends with a remarkable recruiting film sequence that will probably have the teenagers and the 18-25 year-old male action-tainment of the masses, modern-day audiences are responding to exactly the gut-level emotions that the great fascist dictators of this century have used to manipulate their people.

Poledouris agrees that the ambiguity of the picture is one of its most fascinating aspects: "Most of the audience, it's going to go right over their head, frankly. They're going to watch these bugs. But on the other hand, it's saying, 'This is you! Are you aware of this?' This thing works on so many levels. We've often wondered, did the bugs really attack the humans? Maybe poor Joe Smith's, which is some Mormon outpost on one of the places, but did the bugs really send asteroids to the Earth? Or is it just a movie aficionados in the audience cheering, but Verhoeven's graphic fascist imagery should give anyone with a cursory knowledge of World War II an icy chill. "The Fed-Net becomes reality, and reality at the end of the movie is parodying the Fed-Net," Poledouris explains. "So the propaganda, the machine will get everybody to stand up and recruit. That's sort of the way government works, isn't it?" The centerpiece of this sequence is an amazing shot of a vast formation of marching soldiers with the word "YOU!" superimposed over it, an image right out of the Nazi propaganda masterpiece Triumph of the Will. The implications are obvious: by buying into the adrenaline rush of current action movies, in which a one-dimensional "enemy" is created and summarily destroyed for the enter-whole propaganda thing so they can corrupt these planets and drill for oil? It brings up those things."

Paul Verhoeven has always valued the musical contributions of composers to his films, and his collaborations with Poledouris and Jerry Goldsmith have resulted in some of the finest scores of the past decade: Poledouris's Flesh+Blood and RoboCop, and Goldsmith's Total Recall and Basic Instinct. Even at the outset of production, it was intended that Poledouris have an unprecedented 14-16 weeks to compose the music for Starship Troopers. But when the complexity of the film's special effects and an overcrowded summer slate caused Sony to push back the film's premiere from July to November, the extended post-production meant that the composer was in for one of the lengthiest and most grueling schedules in his career.

The process showcases the unique working relationship Verhoeven has with his composers, beginning with the director's assembly of a temp track. "I used some of Basil's music, some things off Red October," recalls the director.

of what the music should be, that's fine.' But in terms of the melodic content and the actual harmonic structure of it, he could care less. That's pretty amazing."

Verhoeven nevertheless is acutely aware of the loss of control that many directors fear when they give their film over to a composer: "I've never worked with a composer, got the music, and thought 'This is it.' I always thought make the outlandish story accessible to the audience. "In this case we concentrated for a long time on melodies, motifs, or a real straight melody. This is because there are love themes, romantic themes, a fleet theme, and many different themes to this movie. Carmen, who is one of the principals, becomes a pilot of a large spaceship and she has a space theme, if you want to call it that. I call it the fleet theme when she gets control over the ship. It's her ambition to become a pilot and ultimately she becomes a pilot at the end of the movie. Also, there was thematic material for certain kinds of bugs: the warriors, the plasma bug, and the tanker bug." Audiences reacted negatively to the film's romantic subplots at its first test-screening in October, and a few scenes involving them were subsequently removed, their music as well.

"When I worked with Jerry Goldsmith it was really similar," says Verhoeven of the collaboration. "I'm trying to be extremely involved in guiding, coaching, and making clear what I think is necessary or what will help me. Sometimes there is no music that will help the scene, or your scene is just not strong enough anyway.

Trying to find music to make it better sometimes is not possible. But often good music can solve the problems in a scene."

In keeping with Verhoeven's musical sensibilities, Poledouris took an approach for the militaristic and bug army aspects of the movie that departed from his earlier, more tonal work. "It's very aggressive. An octatonic scale is used, and it gives it an edge, which Paul has given it visually. It's a scale we used to call double diminished. It's a symmetrical scale, a series of half-steps and whole-steps, and I got way into this thing, because I knew that it needed to sound different.

"I think if you look at, I don't know if this would even be a comparison, but I think what Johnny Williams did with Star Wars—and Paul and I have never even discussed Star Wars in relation to this film—a lot of what he did was, he went retro for a lot of where film scoring was at the time. He was heavily inspired by Mahler, by Holst, and all of that. And I think where Paul and I are coming from, since this is 20 years later, we're heavily influenced by Prokofiev, by Stravinsky. Paul's whole musical aesthetic, like mine—our sense of modern, if you will—is people who were writing 60 years ago, just the way that Mahler was sort of modern in the 1970s. I'm starting to wonder if I didn't go too far back, now that it's coming to the conclusion. I'm wondering if I shouldn't have gone more Alien-like. It's not that electronic

The Starship Troopers scoring posse, outside the Sony Studios scoring stage. Back row, L-R: Basil Poledouris, Paul Verhoeven, Curtis Roush (music editor), Bobbie Poledouris (wife extraordinaire), Eric Colvin (synth programmer). Front row, L-R: Tim Boyle (recording/mixing engineer), Steve Forman (percussionist), Julia Michels (assistant), Zoë Poledouris (singer/songwriter, daughter), Brigit Boyle (2nd engineer), Scott Smalley (orchestrator), Jim Burt (assistant music editor).

Also I used the composer who did Terminator, Brad Fiedel, and Horner's score to Aliens. This always works very well and I use a lot of Aliens in all my temp tracks from Flesh+Blood on. His music is very easy to cut and there are shorter curves in his melodic lines. Basil's music has a much longer curve and is more difficult to cut. You have to cut around the temp track to make it work together." Other selections included The Phantom by David Newman, Stravinsky's modernist masterpiece The Rite of Spring, and Wagner. "A piece like Rite of Spring has those barbaric tones and Wagner has heroic kinds of melodies. This applies very well to the movie which is kind of heroic and barbaric in the way these insects kill you. They cut you in two, cut your head off, cut your legs off, and put their claws right through you; it's a kind of barbaric situation."

Unlike many directors, Verhoeven uses the temp track as more of an editing tool than as a guide for the composers, which Poledouris appreciates. "What Paul would tell me was, 'If you want to listen to it, fine. If there's anything in it that you can use, which is either if you can get an idea of the size of the orchestra that we're interested in or if a particular tempo seems to work that could give you an indication

'Is that it?' It always takes me some time to accept any score because I have my own score in my head. Basically you never get your own score. If it's Jerry, Horner, or Basil you always get the score that they make. It's a very strange process because you have to give your film over to them. The film will never be the same after their music is added. You never get your vision. It's like giving your baby to somebody else. It's different than adding sound effects; sound effects are clearly what you see, but the music colors your film, all your scenes, and interprets them a certain way. You have to say, 'Is this really my interpretation or is this an interpretation I want from now on for that scene excluding any other possibilities of interpretation?'"

Verhoeven's hands-on approach makes for an extremely close working relationship with his composers. "Paul goes over to Basil's house all the time and they play sketches and play some things on the synth," Jon Davison notes. "Paul is the most involved with the composer of any director I've ever seen or met. So by the time he gets to the scoring stage the music definitely has the tone that Paul wanted for each scene."

Verhoeven strove for an approach that would percussion and electronic instruments are foreign to me, but that there was a conscious decision not to put that stuff into the score. All of the sudden, if you hear those effects, you start wondering if you're hearing trailer music."

The approach lent itself well to the double-edged qualities of Verhoeven's direction. "There's an ambiguity to it; you never commit to a tonality, you never commit to a triad," explains the composer. "The themes don't move in the same way that we're used to, say in song direction. The military theme at the end is based on the four major chords of the octatonic scale; it's going up in tritones, and then I turn it around. Interestingly, those triads can either be major or minor because of the half-step relationships, so you have a major or minor chord and everything else is diminished. I got heavily into this scale and after a while it just started to sound like the film. (In the past I've used it as modulations or transitional devices, not as the main course.) I started playing it for Paul and he's going 'Yes,' because I think it reminded him of certain kinds of music he's familiar with. That's why I say it's inspired by it; it's not like we said let's use the Rite of Spring."

The result has been one of the most varied and distinctive scores of Poledouris's career. "Every cue in this movie is like a main title, because Paul approaches everything differently," the composer explains. "Every scene takes you somewhere else; it's been so unlike a normal film where you develop your motifs and you basically do variations of those motifs in different tempi and that's your cue. The devices become more textural and harmonic, associative things."

"I think Paul's been looking for stuff that's highly rhythmic, and he approaches every scene from at least three points of view. That's why I say it's almost like a different main title every time, because he will come back with the same characters and same situations from a different point of view. It's like when they show the bugs moving through that canyon, I'm almost scoring the canyon. This cave at the end has its own kind of weird ambiance. So the environments become almost as important as the characters."

The approach to the immense, cave-dwelling "Brain Bug" seen at the end of the film conjured up some classic science fiction memories of scores like Herrmann's Journey to the Center of the Earth: "We have an organ, which we were afraid to play because of the acoustics in the room. It's pretty outrageous. We spent two days trying to decide whether it should be an organ, so instead of just making it an organ, I wrote what could have easily been played by an organ, but for the whole orchestra. You have to flip in and out of being concerned with going too far over the top, but the whole thing's over the top anyway, so why not go all the way?"

The "Brain Bug" scene did offer Poledouris a new approach towards the film's ear-splitting sound effects: "What we found during the first

"I have always tried to work with a couple of composers. For the Crusades, Basil would be an excellent choice. For Marquis De Sade I would be much more inclined to go with Jerry Goldsmith. I feel these composers are real artists, but an artist expresses himself strongest in his own personality. If you feel the movie is close to that kind of personality, you have to go to that composer." -Paul Verhoeven round of combining music with the sound effects is that oftentimes I may have tried to play the action when the action has been covered by the sound effects. This scene is a direct divergence from the way I've been approaching the orchestration, with many clusters and string textures that I think will work well in filling around the sound effects."

Finding the balance between the subtle electronic textures featured in Poledouris's score and the film's powerful sound effects has been one of the biggest challenges: in effect, Poledouris has to fight his own battle against an invading army of bug sound effects. Given the fact that the sound mixers on Starship Troopers were reportedly wearing ear plugs during the mixing sessions, you have to wonder whether Poledouris will come out on top of this one. "I have demos of the effects, but believe me, until you get on the dubbing stage with a full SDDS sound, you don't have a clue what these things are going to sound like."

Step one in working with the sound effects was avoiding any electronic musical effects that might be perceived as diegetic sound. The bug effects needed to be created electronically, since "we don't have voices for 300-pound bugs that they can go out and record. The other concern, conversely, is that there are no musical-type sound effects that would be construed to be music. Paul didn't want a blurring between sound effects and music; he's been very aware and very conscious of that. So once you take away those elements from the score, it by definition has to be acoustic based on overtones, even if it's octatonic."

The film's lengthy post-production schedule has resulted in some creative approaches to making the score fit around the sound effects: Poledouris rewrote several cues after the initial sound effects mix to compensate for the additional layers of sound in the picture, and on at least one cue individual sections of the orchestra were recorded separately at Verhoeven's request so that the recording levels of each section could be adjusted individually.

Top: Paul Verhoeven on location. Bottom: Casper Van Dien and Denise Richards; some scenes involving the film's romantic subplots were trimmed after initial test screenings.

The R-rated Starship Troopers, like RoboCop, has more than its share of blood-letting, although in this case Verhoeven hasn't had to fight the MPAA to avoid an NC-17 rating. Verhoeven's take on violence has the effect in a number of scenes of pointing out the ugly consequences of situations that are often taken for granted by moviegoers. In other words, when you mix fragile human bodies with heavy artillery, enormous machinery and tank-sized, razor-clawed bugs, there just might be some casualties.

"It's over the top for an effect," Poledouris notes. "I think Verhoeven and John Milius both see violence as something that just happens, that it's natural for the time in which these movies take place, or even today." A sweeping, dark-tinged heroic theme, the part of the score most in the tradition of Poledouris's past work, plays at several key junctures, and it became the main melody in the eyes of the filmmakers. "It was Paul who pointed out this theme very early when I was experimenting with different themes. We found something that I think represented the struggle, the camaraderie, the heroism, with a sense of fate attached to it. Paul's requirements are very thematic and emotional, to humanize what's happening in the middle of all this violence and technology."

Above: Do not take your four-year-old to Starship Troopers. Below: 1987's RoboCop.

The director's point of view has made what might have been a potentially brutal undertaking far easier for the composer, who marks his 45th feature film on the project. "Paul has a strong vision. There's nothing worse than confronting a director who will say to a composer, and they have said it, 'I really don't know what I'm looking for, but I'll know it when I hear it.'"

When you hear that, if you're a composer, it's like your life flashes before your eyes. Basically they don't know what the hell they're doing. They don't have any concept of what the film is and they certainly haven't considered what the music ought to be.

"If somebody who said that to me then kept their mouth shut and let me go off and do my job that would be fine, but I've been involved with those who really mean it. They don't know what they want, and they want to hear everything in the world in the process of searching for it. Then basically they hear something that reminds them of something they've heard before and that's what they like. It's a really sick, stupid process.

"This is the exact opposite of the way Paul works. He knows exactly what he's looking for, he knows the tone of the picture, he knows the characters and why they're doing what they're doing, why each bug makes a particular movement. It's a total understanding. It's such a joy, because what we're involved with then is the creative process. We're not involved with copying something that worked in Alien or worked in Star Trek. He's never once alluded to those things because he knows his film is different from those films and therefore the music should be different from those films."

After coming off the twin successes of Total Recall and Basic Instinct with Jerry Goldsmith, it might be logical to expect that Verhoeven would have stuck with the same composer for Starship Troopers, but that kind of predictability doesn't fit in with the director's working philosophy. "I have always tried to work with a couple of different cinematographers, and a couple of composers, and each of them is suitable for different kinds of movies. For the Crusades, for example, Basil would be an excellent choice. For Marquis De Sade I would be much more inclined to go with Jerry Goldsmith. I feel these composers are real artists, but an artist expresses himself strongest in his own personality. If you feel the movie is close to that kind of personality, I think you have to go to that kind of composer.

"If you listen to Goldsmith's Patton, it's completely different than what we're doing here. Although it's also a war movie, isn't it? But this is a different kind of war movie than Patton. You have to really try and find for your music a particular composer that fits the project best or who's personality is closest to the project."

Verhoeven is a keen analyst of musical styles, and relies on those instincts to judge which composer is best for a project. In the case of Starship Troopers, the heavy emotional involvement of the main characters in the war they're fighting called for Basil Poledouris.

"I think it's this kind of gutsy quality that his music has. Basically, it really goes for a strong emotional statement, more than other composers. Which sometimes is not good and sometimes is great. Sometimes you don't want that. If I look at Basic Instinct I feel, for example, that Jerry Goldsmith was the perfect composer for that. He has this little, ambiguous, distant tone to his music that is not right in your face. Basil's music is much more coming from the underbelly. It's more visceral and it has this kind of enormous feel to it. This is how he is; he doesn't look at music in an extremely intellectual way, he looks at it in more of an emotional way. Other composers, especially Horner and Goldsmith, are a bit more intellectual about their work. For certain movies this is absolutely great. Horner is perhaps a little bit in the middle and Jerry really has a kind of tone and a way of composing that is emotional in the long run, but the music is more like looking through a dark mirror. He's more Apollonian in his music and Basil is Dionysian. Apollonian means you have a distant quality to it while the Dionysian approach is more visceral. So I would say the approach to Basic Instinct is Apollonian and the approach to RoboCop and Starship Troopers is much more Dionysian."

The last Poledouris score to earn the label "Dionysian" was his legendary Conan the Barbarian. It may be too soon to judge whether Starship Troopers will achieve that kind of exalted status, but what has been heard of the score reveals a supercharged effort bristling with jagged string figures, propulsive rhythms and some of the most exciting use of brass figures in recent memory. It's a perfect combination of a unique, Stravinsky-inspired violent quality and the sense of timeless, epic, glorious melodrama that has always been Basil Poledouris's strong suit.

The end results have left producer Jon Davison well satisfied: "The wonderful thing about scoring is that you can see the movie instantly becoming better, when you're in a good scoring session with a good composer," he notes. "Whereas for other aspects of the movie you have to work so hard to make the movie appear even marginally better. You generally don't see the results right away, because it's maybe an optical or an effect. But here you can see such a dramatic coming to life of something right before your eyes, which is so rare in the filmmaking process, apart from actually watching the performances of the actors. It's the only thing that has that immediacy."

Additional reporting by Rudy Koppl.

FILM SCORE
M O N T H L Y

presents:

BASIL POLEDOURIS

His Life and Music

The first in a series of film profiles of composers from
Vineyard Haven Video

Available December
50 minutes

Advance orders now accepted:

Please send me the following
(VHS only)
Add for shipping:

NTSC (U.S. format):
PAL (European format):
U.S./Canada
Rest of world
Total

$24.95
$29.95
$3.00
$5.00

Visa/MasterCard accepted for international (non-U.S.) customers only—send card #, your name on card, and exp. date. Checks payable to Film Score Monthly, U.S.funds only.

Name _____

Address _____

City/State/ Zip/ Country _____

Send Orders to: Film Score Monthly, 5455 Wilshire Blvd, Suite 1500, Los Angeles CA 90036-4201

SOUNDTRACKS... CDs, 45s, LPs... FOR SALE!

DISCOPHILIA

10153 1/2 Riverside Dr #299
Toluca Lake CA 91602

Send your orders, want lists or bids. Please include an L.R.C. or SASE for payment instructions and answers to your inquiries.

The Auction will close on Thursday, Dec. 11, 10PM P.S.T. WRITE TO BID—Include: Name, Phone # and Full Address. FREE SEARCH for any wants! California residents: CA sales tax will be added to all purchases. Thanks for choosing DISCOPHILIA!

Best offers over min. bids. *signifies factory sealed item.

Attention John Williams Collectors

CD Set Sale, Limited Quantities!

American Visions - CD RCA/09026-68786-2 $6.00 each
Please add $4.00 for priority mailing. CA residents add 50¢ sales tax. (Overseas clients request mailing charges when you mail your reservation.) This album includes a selection from "New England Time Capsule" (1987) composed by John Williams.

CDs FOR AUCTION

	Min. Bid
*Alive - James Newton Howard	$60
Au Revoir les Enfants (Goodbye, Children) 1988	50
Aux Yeux du Monde - Gerard Torkian 1991	20
Body Heat - Ind. ed. #1735/2000, John Barry	200
*De Maria Luisa Bemberg - Nicola Piovani	25
Dragonslayer - Ind. ed. #131/2000, Alex North	100
*Guarding Tess - Michael Convertino (sealed/notched)	35
Lady Beware - Japan - 1987 - Craig Safan	100
Lion King, The - Circle of Life - promo pic disc	35
Last World, The: John Williams-radio sampler promo	100
Papadoulas, Costa - composer promo - Sony/France	25
Polican Brief, The - James Horner	35
Promised Land - James Newton Howard - 1987	60
Qui C'est le Garçon? - Philippe Sarda - 1987 (box notched)	65
*River of Death - Sasha Matson - Germany	50
*Ruby Cairo - John Barry - Japanese issue	70
*Stepping Out - Liza Minnelli - 1991 import	30
*Tail Spin - Christopher L. Stone promo	200
War of Wills, The - Basil Poledouris promo	200
Young Americans, The - OST - 1993 (box notched)	50

LPs 12" FOR AUCTION

	Min. Bid
Beli - Giorgio Gaslini (1970 Roma) Cinevox MDF32/41	$75
Barbarian and the Geisha - Hugo Friedhofer (Fox 3094)	200
Berlin Blues - Lalo Schifrin (MGM A357) 1988	25
*Boogey Man, The - SST/Tim Kraf (Ind. ed. #637/1000)	70

Castello dei Pastori, La - Italian TV '77 EMI 3C064-18300	25
Cinderella - WDL-4007 Red/Silver label (good cond.)	50
Citta' Prigioniera, La - Piero Piccioni (1962-VG cond.)	125
Danger UXB - Simon Park (British TV Film Series 1979)	25
Dead End - Giorgio Carini (side A) and (side B) is Quel
Maledetto Ponte Sull'Arno - Michele Lacerenza (CAM)	85
*Decamerone Nero, Il - Luciano Michelini RCA/DLS 12	75
Diavolo, Il - Piero Piccioni (1963) CAM/Cms.30-061	75
Ebreo Fascista, L' - Aldo Salvi (1980) Cinevox/71 B004	40
Gli Angeli del 2.000 - Mario Melino '69 CAM SAG9020	125
Great Expectations - Maurice Jarre (1974)	30
Hocate - Carlos D'Alessio ('83 L. Hutton film) France	35
Legend of Franchia King, The - Francis Lai (71 Barlot film)	75
Legend Ecran - Michel Legrand (rare LP, Ball 2308070)	150
*Lords of Flatbush, The - Joe Brooks (74 Stallone film)	35
Malade Imaginaire, Le - Piero Piccioni (79 France)	25
*Marion Cop - Jay Chatterway '88 Phoenix/Kiesla label	30
Mario Chapdelaine - Louis Furey '83 Kabec-disque SBI	35
Marriage Parfait, Le - Peter Thomas (fair cond.)	70
Morning of the Earth - G. Wayne Thomas ('72 surfing film)	50
Not Quite Jerusalem - R.Veneziano (J. Pacula film) '85 U.K.	20
*1001 Arabian Nights - G. Duning (mono/orig. plastic bag)	75
Our Man Flint - Jerry Goldsmith (1966, stereo) TFS 4179	75
Ragazza con la Pistola, La - P. De Luca '68 RCA/DLS1	75
Saul e David - T. Uselli (1965 Milano) CAM/Cms.30-127	125
Scipione detto anche L'Africano - S. Gazzaloni '72 Cinevox	100
Tecce, La - A. Traversoli '73 2LPs RCA/DLS18 (M. Vini film)	90
Tre Dollari di Piombo - G. Angelo '65 CAM/Cms.30-130	250
Uomo Europeo, L' - Francesco De Masi (TV documentary)	90

45s w/a PIX COVERS AUCTION	Min. Bid
EVA - Crane/Ross - Atlantic vocal/instrumental	$15
The Little Hut - MGM - Liberty w/ The James Boys	15
Pharaoh's Curse - Les Baxter - GNP/Tony Martinez	15
Molly and Lowless John - "Take Me Home" Mondo/Bergman - white label advance promo for Oscar consideration	40
Soldier in the Rain - H. Mancini theme w/ B. Hackett Epic	20

45s w/ PIX COVERS FOR AUCTION	Min. Bid
I'll Cry Tomorrow - British cover/MGM-EP-555 S. Hayward	$30
Larkboy Children, The - British TV series '80 Virgin VS357	15
La Nuit Americaine "Day for Night" G. Delerue WB14274	30
Pete 'n' Tilly - Love Theme - John T. Williams w/Martha	35
La Process - Phillips EP-432-844 Orson Welles film w/ Perkins	25
Smokey, Smokey - E. Lai UA/UP 35.228 - w/ Cath. Allegret	15
To Have and to Hold - theme song/TWT-TV series/C. Stock	20
Two Weeks in Another Town - theme/MGM/D. Raksin Epic	30

Always Discos

RUA AUGUSTA, 1.371 - LOJA 104
CEP 01305-100 SAO PAULO - SP
BRAZIL

• SOUNDTRACKS • MOVIE POSTERS • • CDs & LPs • FREE CATALOG •

Last copies of: ALADDIN, CAPE FEAR, STAR TREK VI
& MERMAIDS on LP

SUMMER OF '42 & ROME ADVENTURE
Brazilian Edition CD for U.S. $18.99

WE ACCEPT VISA CREDIT CARD

PHONE: 0055-11-285.6677

FAX: 0055-11-285-2311

e-mail: always@uol.com.br

WE ARE THE BIGGEST SOUTH AMERICAN STORE
SPECIALIZED IN ORIGINAL SOUNDTRACKS

CD SOUNDTRACK SALE

Accidental Tourist (Williams) $60
Adventures of Baron Munchausen (Kamen) $30
Adventures of Black Feather (Reynolds) $30
Article 99 (Elman) $20
Basketcase 2 / Frankenhooker (Renzetti) $30
Bear, The (Sarda) $30
Beast, The (Isam) $30
Black Sunday / Baron Blood (Baxter) $20
Boxing Helena (Rivelli) $50
Buccaneer, The (Bernstein) $20
*Burbs, The (Goldsmith) $80
Burnin' Love (Hendrix / etc.) $20
Cage (Wetherwax) $30
Calm at Sunset (Trost) $60
Canterville Ghost (Trost) $60
Career Opportunities (T. Newman) $30
Casualties of War (Morricone) $20
Chase, The (Barry) $30
City of Joy (Indian Score) (Blackford) $30
Collector, The (Jarre) $30
Day of the Dolphin (Delerue) $30
Dracula: Dead & Loving It (Mann) $30
Drugstore Cowboy (Goldenthal) $20
Enemy Mine (Jarre) $20
Field, The (Bernstein) $30
Flattered (Petrovic) $40
Flower Planet / Roboshow (Newman) $60
Fort Saganne (Sarda) $30
Ghost in the Shell (Kawaji) $20
Hammie Caulder / Hunchback (Thorne) $30
Hatari (Mancini) $30
Heaven and Earth (Samurai Epic) (Komuro) $30
Hellraiser (C. Young) $30
Hemingway's Adv. of a Young Man (Waxman) $20
Hot Shots (Levy) $20
In Harm's Way (Goldsmith) $90
Julia and Julia (Jarre) $30
Long Riders, The (Cooder) $30
MacArthur (Goldsmith) $20
Masada (Goldsmith) $40
Matilda (CDR) (D. Newman) $90
Mississippi Mermaid (Duhamel) $30
Mortal Kombat: Journey Begins (Shute) $40

Mountains of the Moon (Small) $30
Off Limits (Howard) $20
Piano Lesson (Andrews / Taylor) $50
Pirates (Sarda) $20
Polly (McNeely) $20
Promise to Carolyn (Karpman) $50
Purple People Eater (Dreith / etc.) $30
Quiller Memorandum (Barry) $20
Rescuers Down Under (Broughton) $80
Rose Tattoo (North) $40
Scream (score / promo / CDR) (Beltrami) $90
7th Voyage of Sinbad (Herrmann) $60
Sex, Lies and Videotape (Martinez) $20
Shipwrecked (Doyle) $40
Short Eyes (Mayfield) $30
Sicilian, The (Mansfield) $30
Space Camp (Williams) $90
Space Ghost Coast to Coast (Sharrack) $50
Spellbound (Stanyan) (Rovza) $30
Stagecoach / Trouble With Angels (Goldsmith) $30
Time of Destiny (Morricone) $20
Twilight Zone (15CD import set) (Various) $140
Walk on the Wild Side (Bernstein) $30
What's Up Tiger Lily/You're Big Boy Now (Schechtman) $30
Where the River Runs Black (Horner) $20
Wild Bunch (score in stereo / promo) (Felding) $90
Wisdom (Elman) $20
Witches of Eastwick (Williams) $150
Without Air (Ramsey) $40
Woman of Independent Means (Karpman) $50
Elmer Bernstein: John Wayne, Vol. 1 $30
Best of Hemdale $20
Georges Delerue: London Sessions, Vol. 1 $20
Jerry Goldsmith: SPFM Tribute
[Promo - #395 + program] $300
Mark Isham: Rabbit Ears Storybook Films $20
Kraft-Benjamin Agency Sampler (Promo) $60
Randy Miller: Music for Films (Promo) $20
MGM Sampler: Sneak Preview (2CDs/promo) $30
MTM Productions: 25th Anniversary (Promo) $60
Basil Poledouris: Honor and Glory (Promo) $80
Miklos Rozsa: Hollywood Spectacular (Bay Cities) $20
Christopher Young: 5 CD Promo Set $140

STEPHEN C. HARRIS, 10949 PALMS BLVD. #14, L.A., CA 90034 PHONE: (310) 837-7377

Soundtrack Auctions

All bids must be submitted on, or before 9PM, Friday, December 12, 1997. All payments should be made out to Dennis Tupper at P.O. Box 3171, Tustin CA 92781, U.S.A. There are no minimum bids, or reserves.

CD AUCTION

- 1 Apollo 13 [Promo] Horner
- 2 Body Heat Barry
- 3 The Boy Who Could Fly Broughton
- 4 Captain Ron [Promo] Pike
- 5 Dreamscape Jarre
- 6 Flesh + Blood [Varèse Club] Poledouris
- 7 Goldsmith SPFM
- 8 Chris Young Promo Set [5 CDs]
- 9 Tai Pan Jarre
- 10 Tale Spin [Promo] Stone

CDs FOR SALE

- 1 Airport Newman 9.00
- 2 The Alamo [Legacy] Tlomkin 8.00
- 3 Alexander Nevsky Prokofiev 9.00
- 4 Blood Moon May 35.00
- 5 Blue Healers various 15.00
- 6 Clockers [Score] Blanchard 9.00
- 7 Come See the Paradise Edelman 25.00
- 8 Con Air Mancina 10.00
- 9 Crimes of Passion Wakeman 8.00
- 10 Death Shire at the Movies 20.00
- 11 Death Before Dishonor May 26.00
- 12 Defending Your Life Gore 9.00
- 13 The English Patient Yared 12.00
- 14 Film Music of Hugo Friedhofer 20.00
- 15 Flight of the Navigator Silvestri 25.00
- 16 The Fog Carpenter 25.00
- 17 Genesis Shankar 11.00
- 18 Gorillas in the Mist Jarre 8.00
- 19 Highlander [Trilogy] Kamen/Copeland/Robinson 12.00

- 20 Homage à Noir Hildenbeutel 12.00
- 21 Hope and Glory Martin 18.00
- 22 Hot Shots [Japan] Levy 20.00
- 23 In the Blood Kissel 9.00
- 24 Is Paris Burning? Jarre 15.00
- 25 Julia & Julia Jarre 12.00
- 26 The Killing Fields Oldfield 9.00
- 27 La Corsa Dell' Innocente Sillotto 20.00
- 28 La Femme Nikita Serra 6.00
- 29 Lily Was Here Stewart 10.00
- 30 Midnight Run Elfman 45.00
- 31 Mortal Kombat [Score] Clinton 18.00
- 32 Norma Jean & Marilyn Young 10.00
- 33 The Nun's Story Waxman 18.00
- 34 On Her Majesty's Secret Service Barry 10.00
- 35 The Raggedy Rawney Kamen 6.00
- 36 Rampage Morricone 7.00
- 37 The Ring Legrand 10.00
- 38 Rocky III Conti 6.00
- 39 Return to Oz Shire 50.00
- 40 Samson & Delilah Young 12.00
- 41 The Shooting Party Scott 15.00
- 42 Soldier Blue Budd 22.00
- 43 Starman Nitzsche 8.00
- 44 Toy Soldiers Folk 37.00
- 45 Trespass Cooder 9.00
- 46 War & Peace Rota 65.00
- 47 Warning Sign Safan 25.00
- 48 Wendy Cracked a Walnut Smeaton/Chindamo 35.00
- 49 The Young Americans Arnold 25.00

Payments must be U.S. Postal Money Orders. Postage U.S. $4.00 [1st disc] $.75 for each additional disc. No Postage for orders of $200.00 or more within the United States. Postage Europe $7.50 [1st disc] $1.50 each additional disc. Postage Africa, Australia and the Orient $8.00 [1st disc] $1.50 for each additional disc.

It's impossible to introduce Howard Shore without using an abundance of hyphens. He can be accurately presented as the composer for light comedies, or for nihilistic horrors—for legal dramas, or for mind-bending hallucinations—for pseudo-documentaries, or for high-concept parodies.

Howard Shore exists in that rarest of planes where one can totally escape musical typecasting because, simply put, he can and has done it all. His ability to understand the needs of any style of film have provided listeners with some of the most interesting and challenging scores of the past several years. He can get inside a film like few other composers and has the ability to stretch our expectations with the most natural of gestures.

Filmmakers know of Shore's abilities, and they use him—there always seems to be another promising work on the horizon, from such directors as David Cronenberg, David Fincher and Al Pacino. When I caught up with him, Howard had just returned from participating in the Scene by Scene masterclass series in Scotland, in which he, the first composer ever to participate, analyzed a few scenes from Cronenberg's latest, Crash (the lecture will be published in the book series, Projections). He was able to find a few spare minutes to chat about the latest trends in his own output, and about his most recent score, for David Fincher's The Game.

Doug Adams: Many of your recent scores don't seem like they're dramatically conceived by way of illustrating the plot. They seem to be more of a representation of less-tangible elements within the film. For example, in Seven you're not doing "Victim #1," "Victim #2," and just following the story along. It's more of the sound of the attitude of living around all this decay. How do you decide which kinds of gestures are going to be appropriate for this kind of approach?

Howard Shore: [Thoughtful pause] A lot of these decisions have to do with the type of film.

DA: Do you think that that's a fair assessment of your style?

HS: Well, some movies I have done like that. [Followed the drama more closely and illustrated the plot.]

Playing the Game in ShoreLand

Howard Shore, of The Silence of the Lambs and Seven fame, takes his unique sensibility to Cop Land and David Fincher's latest, The Game.

Interview by DOUG ADAMS

DA: In your recent output?

HS: Well, probably even in the more recent output there are movies that are done in that style. But, I tend to find that kind of an older approach to using film music. The way music is used in film changes significantly every four or five years. Have you ever been in one room and in another room there's a movie on television and you hear the music? You can tell the period—the decade—from the underscoring. You can get a pretty good idea what period it was, from the sound of the production, the way it was mixed, and even the approach to the way the music was used in the movie.

DA: So, this approach is your contribution towards keeping things modern, keeping things rolling along?

HS: Well, no, I don't know that it's a contribution. I think of it more as an approach, not good, or bad, or modern, or whatever. Some films, when you're writing them, you don't want to see too much. You want to capture the essence of the scenes and not score them so frame-specific. And other pictures, you want them to be very, very specific. The Game is interesting in that sense. It's not scored like Seven. Where Seven was scored more the way we're talking about now, The Game is actually very specific. You were saying in Seven that the music would express things like the decay in a scene, whereas in The Game, the movie is about perception.

Top: Michael Douglas in The Game. Bottom: Douglas and director David Fincher on the set. Unlike Seven, Shore's score is very specific to the actions and perceptions of the film.

It's about what's real and what's not, and what you're looking at and whether that's real or not, and what you're hearing and whether that's real or not. So, the music had to be very specific, because it didn't deal in generalities. It had to be incredibly specific even to the moment that it was happening.

DA: Your scores are put together so well, in terms of continuity. There's always something that binds everything together. In Crash for example, you have the similar electric guitar timbres, and the same D minor tonalities. How do you handle the balancing act between developing the material and not changing it so far as to alter the continuity of the score?

HS: I like to think of a score as a piece. And you have to think of the film as a piece. If you look at the pages of the script, what are scripts now? 112 pages is sort of the normal size of a script these days, right?

DA: Well, I guess. I don't get a lot of scripts in the mail.

HS: [laughs] Oh, you don't? I read a lot of scripts and notice that they're all about the same length. So the form of most movies is similar in the sense that you're dealing with 10 to 12 reels. You can look at the score as being of-a-piece, and that's the way I like to think of it. Crash is a good example because the score is a piece in itself. Looking for Richard is like that, too. I tried to write both of those scores independent of the film and then apply them to the film.

It's almost like I wrote a piece of music that was an hour long and then I said, "Okay, now I'm going to use this music to score this movie." And that's what I did. I took the pieces of it out of the whole, and scored the movie with those. So what you're really hearing in Looking for Richard or in Crash are the parts of the whole broken up into pieces. That's why it tends to have continuity to it, and it has a structure and a sound that's congruous to the whole.

DA: That's interesting. We often hear scores where it feels like the music changes styles or approaches for every scene. It's interesting to hear your scores because they definitely feel like one score, one approach to the film.

HS: That's what I'm trying to achieve. Sometimes I'm successful. You also have to work with filmmakers who can understand that, because not everybody really understands the musical form of a movie.

DA: Does that alter your choices as to who you work with?

HS: I think it does. And it does in terms of reading scripts and feeling that there will be enough leeway for you to do the type of score that you want.

DA: I've heard that David Fincher is very involved with the small details of his films. Did that extend to the music in The Game?

HS: I've worked with him really openly and really well. He's been very open to using my music in his films. It's like one artist working with another. There's a lot of space and a lot of respect for what we both are doing. You couldn't ask for a better relationship.

The New Acoustics

DA: Let's talk a bit about the way that you're putting these scores together with all the electronic manipulation in them.

HS: Well, it's probably not much different than what I was doing with that early Cronen-berg period where I would create non-tonal sounds. Always non-tonal, I'd never used any electronic stuff in a tonal sense. I'd always just used it in an abstract sense. I would write my orchestra parts as an accompaniment to that, then I'd mix them myself. Sometimes I would balance it out; I'd put a little more orchestra in than the non-tonal electronics, [or] sometimes I would put more electronics in. In Scanners, all the electronic music I recorded myself on a cassette machine (because the production budget was so low), then I would loop those tracks. I had hours and hours of electronic sounds.

As a kid, when I was 10, I had a tape recorder and I would tape sounds and cut them up and stick them together. I would play with this tape recorder for years making tapes. That's also why I was interested in Takemitsu. I'd heard Toru Takemitsu's music when I was very young. It influenced me a lot because he was doing things that were very similar to what I was hearing and what I wanted to do. So, I've done the same thing over the years. Except now, many years later and having had all that experience, it is a little bit more sophisticated. So, you've got a movie like The Game where everything was [digital]. The cassette machines and analog tapes are completely gone on The Game. I don't think we ran tape at all, everything was all done using two computers and a digital console.

In the tracks to The Game, because of the heightened perception of the movie, I wanted the music to be very specific, and the sounds to be very specific in the orchestra. I didn't want to record a big orchestral sound with a lot of air, without the detail, where all the sounds of the orchestra were playing in one room and you sort of heard a little bit of the clarinet mixed with the violas or the violins. I wanted all the sounds to be very specific, because the movie was so specific. So I recorded a lot of the music in tracks and pieces of the orchestra, and experimented with the microphone techniques. Sometimes you'll hear musical sounds in the film that are actually very soft sounds that are recorded and mixed very loudly. And loud sounds I would suppress, so that you would hear them sounding very quiet in the mix.

I was trying to upset what the perception of orchestral sounds were like, and how they were perceived. The only way I could do that was to record sections of the orchestra independently. Then, through computer systems like Sonic Solutions, I was able to manipulate them myself. I spent a lot of time in post-production, actually—maybe a couple weeks—manipulating the sounds that I had recorded. And, in a way, recomposing them. It's the same process I did on Crash where I'd go out and record acoustic sounds. I'd record some electronic stuff, and then I'd recompose them in the studio. However, The Game had a full, complete score written for it that I orchestrated. I just recorded the pieces individually so I could really heighten the reality of them.

There's a lot of piano music in The Game. The piano is the psyche of the main character, Nicholas Van Orton, and it follows him through the movie. As he becomes quieter and passive, the piano music gets quieter and passive. If he gets more frantic, the piano music gets more "out" and more crazy. It follows his emotional arc through the movie. Sometimes the piano music relates to the orchestral tonalities, and sometimes it doesn't—it has its own space, in a way. Naked Lunch was like that a little bit. It had this score and then it had Ornette. And in Ornette Coleman's playing, sometimes the improvisation related to the score, and sometimes it didn't. It played on its own level, and it played almost in a different frequency. In The Game, the piano music is always in a very high register—the top two octaves of the instrument. And the orchestra sounds are very dark, creating a lot of low, beautiful two-part counterpoint underneath the dialogue. So [the score] had a top and a bottom, and most of the middle is the movie—the dialogue and the effects. So, it's got a lot of air and a lot of space to it when you see the film.

DA: Were the colors that you're using (the low sounds and the high piano) dictated by the way you were going to use them along with the dialogue in the movie, or were they suggested by the attitude of the movie?

HS: Both. I wanted something abstract enough to work with and to develop through the movie. And I knew I wanted to use the piano. The piano plays a significant role in it. So, I wanted to use the piano and I wanted to use a counterpoint, really, to the piano music. That's where I developed a lot of the low counterpoint that plays underneath it.

DA: When you're coming up with the colors that are going to be most prominent in the score, how do you decide how much material is enough material, or enough of a cache of colors that you're going to be able to develop it without having trouble stretching it, or finding something that you didn't use enough?

HS: For me it's more elimination. I can hear the sounds in my head and I can eliminate the colors when I'm orchestrating, and then I'm left with a cast, in a sense. Then, I look at the cast—if you're writing a play, not everybody is speaking at once. There are central characters, and there are supporting characters. So I think of the sounds of the score like that. I think of how they relate to each other and how much you'll hear of that particular sound in the film. I do it partly as an elimination of certain sounds and just seeing what I want to use. Then I use that palette for the whole thing, like a cast of characters.

DA: So, it's very much conceived of in dramatic terms then?

HS: Yes.

DA: The score for The Game seems very well formed in an overall sense. This is probably an extrapolation of what we were talking about before where you conceive of these things as one large piece. There are a lot of dramatic relationships—the way that you open and close the score with that lyrical piano melody in A minor; the way that the only major chord in the score is right before the closing bars. And inside the film, there are a bunch of relationships between keys, and an opposition of very closed string harmonies and very open fourths and fifths. Without making like you have to analyze the entire score, could you talk a little bit about how you've got it structured?

HS: Oh boy! [laughs] I guess I could. Oh boy...

DA: It's a big question.

HS: It really is, yeah! I think of the tonal rela-

"A film score is only a film score when it's recorded and mixed and put in the film. A film score isn't really about the document that's the score, even though you have to create that. It's really about the piece that's on tape. It's a one-time-only thing."

tionships like the characters as well. I'm writing it [and] I always orchestrate after. When I'm writing what I consider the score, I'm just thinking of it in terms of tonal relationships. That's all I'm thinking about. I'm not thinking about colors or sounds or anything. I'm only thinking of register, I'm only thinking of unisons, and octaves, and counterpoint—thirds, fourths, ninths, whatever the relationships are. That's how I wrote it.

You could take the essence of The Game and you could distill it down into two- or three-part counterpoint. The piano is a little different than that, because the piano music doesn't always relate to the tonal counterpoint of the rest of the score. But, I didn't want it to. The piano music only relates to one of the characters in the film, Nicholas Van Orton. It's almost like the piano music has been applied to the other tonal form that I've created. There are a few pieces in The Game where I've used alternate tunings. There are things that I will do just for the pure sound of them.

It's interesting, when I was writing The Game, I found myself thinking about Videodrome, which had some similar tonal structures to the score. Videodrome was written in 1980. But, there were certain things that I think I did in The Game, harmonically and contrapuntally, that reminded me of that score. I think a lot of it had to do with left hand—lower octaves and stuff like that, and how they related to the upper octaves.

DA: In terms of motion, or in terms of spacing the voices?

HS: Well, in this score the two octaves don't always relate. Sometimes the upper octave doesn't necessarily relate to the lower one; it's like there are almost two pieces going on.

Top: Annabella Sciorra and Sylvester Stallone in Cop Land. Bottom: James Mangold (center) directs Robert De Niro and Stallone.

Naked Lunch had similar cues that had a couple of different pieces going on at the same time. The Game is very polyphonic, except for that beginning and that end which are quite centered. There's a theme that's used in the movie that has to do with the Sean Penn character. You asked me earlier about some of these scenes and I said it was unlike Seven. This is not like Seven either, in a sense that there actually is a relationship between them—they're brothers. And that theme relates to that family, to the brothers. I use it at the beginning in an 8mm flashback—it's a home movie of the family. Then you hear it throughout the movie in some sparse pieces as it is related to the Sean Penn character, Conrad Van Orton.

DA: So the brothers are related in that they're both represented by the piano.

A page from Shore's music to The Game, as prepared by Ryan Shore in Finale. courtesy Howard Shore

HS: Yes. Well, the Penn character is the one who gives the "game" to Douglas's character, Nicholas Van Orton. He gives it to him as a birthday present.

Impressions of Cop Land

DA: You brought up a really interesting point about how some of these scenes almost feel like they have two separate pieces of music going on. It seems like a lot of your stuff is conceived in terms of a synthesis of shapes instead of one overall tempo that's guiding the scene around. The recent scene that pops to my mind would be the climax of Cop Land. It's like a bunch of shapes swelling up together, with the bagpipes working against the strings, instead of one beat-oriented thing. It's very interesting.

HS: I spent a long time working on that.

DA: That cue or that score?

HS: That cue. I spent a long, long time. And I loved the piece. I actually put it on the first track of the record because I so loved it. I really try to do certain things that are a bit experimental, and it takes me a long time to do those things. Sometimes you succeed and sometimes you sort of get there. It depends on how you wrote it; it depends on how the electronics integrate into the acoustic tonal stuff. Sometimes it just works beautifully and I can really structure things great. It doesn't always happen, but I'm still working on it. I guess that's the thing that keeps me going and keeps it somewhat fresh.

I'm still trying to create something that I'm hearing [in my head]. Sometimes I get close to it, and sometimes I feel like I almost get there. In that scene I felt like I got there. There are a couple of things in The Game that felt like that, too—where they just seem perfectly right, where the orchestra and electronics are perfectly right and the blend of it is just perfect.

DA: Where was "there" in that Cop Land scene? What were your goals that you feel that you met in that scene?

HS: Well, it's complicated. It's a long piece. I wrote the orchestral parts of it and left very specific places for the electronics, then created the electronics. Now, it's the mixing of the two together that's the most difficult; you're just dealing with pure sound, with the acoustic recording that you've done and you're dealing with the electronic music that you've created. I think of mixing as part of the creative compositional process. Because even though you're writing this music, a film score is only a film score when it's recorded and mixed and put in the film. A film score isn't really about the document that's the score, even though you have to create that. It's really about the piece that's on tape. It's a one-time-only thing. It doesn't exist other than just being on this piece of tape, or in a computer, or whatever the format. That final photograph, the piece of tape that exists at the very end of the long process, is really all that exists. It's like a great mix on anything, on any record. Sometimes you get it and sometimes you just don't.

DA: That's interesting. Film music is one of the few forms of music in which there really is one absolute performance.

HS: Right; it only exists for that moment. I did so much live recording in the '80s and early '90s, and I liked it in a way because it was that: turn the tape on, here's the piece. As soon as you did it, it was over and you got it. But, then I found that you can only get to one level that way. It seemed that with film music, well, wait a minute, I could do other things with this piece. That didn't have to be the end of it; I could go further. I could remix this. I could change the acoustics in the studio. I could mic things this way. I could add this sound to that sound and make a new sound. The post-production process suddenly became really interesting because it gave me more chance to realize something that was un-realizable in a live performance. But having said all that, live performance is still the essence of film music. We couldn't make film music unless we had great musicians playing live. If you listen to The Game, there's a lot of work that's been done beyond the initial recording, but when you listen to it, it still is all those people playing.

DA: So you don't think we're ever going to end up with purely synths?

HS: Never. You never will, because you have this human element. And movies are about humans. It's a human thing. The music we listen to being played by people, we've heard all our lives. It's so culturally and emotionally ingrained in us. I think we'll manipulate it, and we'll turn it upside-down and backwards but it's always going to be played on those instruments—we're always going to have those performances.

DA: You've said that your style has changed very much over the years. What do you see as differences in your aesthetics from before as compared to now?

HS: In film music?

DA: In film music, or maybe even just in general being a musician, being a composer.

HS: Well, it's just natural growth, I guess. Just working with the orchestra that much every year—writing and orchestrating that much music every year. I don't think that my music, compositionally, has necessarily changed, although I've probably tried a lot of different kinds of films.

DA: Do you think someone could point to something and say this is a 1980s Howard Shore score, this is a 1990s Howard Shore score?

HS: I don't know. I guess if you looked at the eight Cronenberg films, they're nice as a piece, and they are quite different, actually. They've all been done so specifically to those films. But are there threads that run all through that? I don't know. I think that there probably are.

DA: Do you think that your goals have changed at all over time? Have you always had the idea of using the music to interact as characters, and those kinds of things that we've been talking about?

HS: When I first started to write film music I thought of it more as a way of expressing ideas that I had musically. It was a way to create the sounds I was hearing and wanted to produce. I thought that film music was a good way to do that. I mean, that hasn't changed. I'm very open-minded, really, when I look at new movies to do. But then again, as a film composer you're still working within a given structure.

In the early years that I was doing film music, I wasn't really doing that. I was just writing and working on movies and pretty much doing whatever I wanted. It was a different time. I'm still doing that to some degree on certain films. It's what I want to do rather than having to fit into a genre. I think I probably did more of that at another point in my career, probably in the late '80s when I was experimenting with genres and trying different things. But, as a musician, you want to develop the ideas that you're interested in developing. Sometimes I'll work on some things that are just completely tonal, and I'll go a little insane after a while. Because it's not really in my nature to be doing something like that, although I think I do it well. I do them because it's fun and I know how to do them and it's sort of refreshing. Whereas, if I'm writing something that's a little closer to what I'm interested in doing musically, like Crash or The Game, it just comes so much more naturally. And, I feel so much more a part of it musically. •

Thanks go to the eternally helpful Cathy Moore, and to Howard for his time, interest, and assistance. Doug Adams can be reached at 18624 Marshfield, Homewood IL 60430; or E-mail: Doug@filmscoremonthly.com.

HOWARD SHORE

Cop Land ★★½

Milan 35827-2. 12 tracks - 40:42

The Game ★★

London 458 556-2. 14 tracks - 58:56

Howard Shore's great talent is his ability to find the road less traveled—that pathway into a film that the audience never would have expected, yet which is so germane that it both sums up and expands the film's realities. Take Cop Land: the film involves the titular town—a burg inhabited almost entirely by New York cops and their families. One of these officers has screwed up and shot a car full of young black men. The older cops cover for him by faking his suicide, then decide that he must really be killed lest he give their secret away. Only dimwitted Freddie (Sylvester Stallone), the hearing-impaired town sheriff, knows of their plan—but will he upset the quiet village to make the truth be known?

Contrary to time-honored tradition, the score contains no tormented "decision" themes, no synth-beat "conspirators" music, and no "hero's welcome" chorale for the finale. Instead, Shore depicts the police element through a combination of carefully chosen timbres. The main theme is a repeated perfect fourth, usually orchestrated for trumpet, which alternates between a G and C and an E and A. It musically portrays the cops with a signal-like sound, like a police siren, while never becoming simply a literal musical translation of that sound. It grants Shore a deftly intangible connection to the film's characters and setting.

The other prominent effect in the score is the sound of bagpipes. What do bagpipes have to do with cops? Police funerals often feature bagpipes—in other words, police mortalities. This becomes important in the highlight of the scored film, the climactic scene. Here, a now totally deaf Freddie tracks down and shoots the rogue cops. Various sounds depict the ringing of Freddie's injured ear. These cross the line between diegetic sound effects and electronic effects in the score, and it's a clever blurring. Multiple string chords and bagpipes swell up above these sounds, then everything is blended and warped by Shore's post-recording manipulation. The result is a cue almost entirely devoid of tempo, but with several discernible shapes. Aiding this effect is Shore's exacting use of disjunct counterpoint: instead of layering several different melodic lines, he's combining miniature regions of color. It's not unlike the way Alex North composed where there's a high region, a mid region, and a low region which are allowed to interact. Shore tends more towards opposing sonic effects and instrument groups than ranges, but the multi-tiered effect is the same. If the term Impressionism hadn't already been applied to a musical school of thought, it would be incredibly apropos here.

When I first heard that Howard Shore was scoring The Game, I expected that the end result may resemble the successful score he did for David Fincher's last film, Seven.

Once again, however, Shore gains entrance to the project in a way we could hardly have expected. Seven was a wonderfully gut-churning score—the essence of living in that soul-smearing city. In contrast, The Game is a prickly, pins-and-needles work that bristles with a kind of hyper-immediacy. So if Seven represented a numbness to every-day horrors, The Game is more of a paranoid, extrasensory delusion—i.e. every little aspect of life is magnified and scrutinized. The score is made up of the most sparse of colors: low string and woodwind counterpoint, high string harmonics and piano, a French horn or two peeking through the texture every so often. But these forces are assembled and mixed with a Webern-like eye towards minutia which lends the score its jangled-nerve character. As usual, Shore has reflected and enhanced the exact attitudes in the film.

Many filmmakers expect composers to supply, or at least aid the emotion in films. It can work a lot of ways—a happy scene can simply become happier, or perhaps a sad scene can take on a hint of honor, or moral triumph or whatever. But what's the overall emotion in The Game? It ranges from anger to sorrow to confusion... and that's really a mind-set more than an emotion. The point is, an emotion-driven score wouldn't work in many sections of this film. There's a melancholy piano melody that opens and closes the picture, and a single major chord at a crucial point (the only major chord in the score, incidentally). But the majority of the narrative needs more of a glancing dramaticism. Shore's score is all about perceptions, dichotomies, and character relationships. That's why it is vastly more intelligent than a hypothetical "Nicholas is mad because he can't figure out what's happening"-style underscore. The music genuinely adds to what's on the screen rather than simply restating it.

As albums, Cop Land is more accessible than The Game, due to its less-synchronized nature, although both are subdued. The Game also includes "White Rabbit" by Jefferson Airplane.

—Doug Adams

MUSIC COMPOSED AND CONDUCTED BY MICHAEL NYMAN

GATTACA

ORIGINAL MOTION PICTURE SOUNDTRACK

PRODUCED BY MICHAEL NYMAN
HTTP://WWW.VIRGINRECORDS.COM
AOL KEYWORD: VIRGIN RECORDS
MOTION PICTURE ARTWORK AND PHOTOGRAPHY:
©1997 COLUMBIA PICTURES INDUSTRIES, INC.

JERSEY RECORDS

Virgin

COLUMBIA
PICTURES

SCORE

The latest in soundtrack CD releases.

Seven Years in Tibet ★★★★★

JOHN WILLIAMS

Sony Classical SK 60271. 14 tracks - 65:53

Downshifting after The Lost World: Jurassic Park, John Williams tackles director Jean-Jacques Annaud's Seven Years in Tibet, the story of German athlete Heinrich Harrer who encounters and befriends the young Dalai Lama. Williams is the perfect choice for an epic drama such as this, and although his music is grand and at times richly melodious, it somehow retains a softer, more reflective air.

The score to Seven Years in Tibet is written primarily for strings, and the trio of themes Williams draws from are excellent, varied opportunities for string performance. The first, a triplet-heavy 3/4 motif, uses broad strokes in an overture for Harrer's epic physical journey and well as the large scope of the film's spirituality. Minor chords and extensive solo cello writing (performed by Yo-Yo Ma) encompass the second theme, Williams's musical interpretation of Harrer's own spiritual journey. Having left a pregnant wife behind with a disturbing casualness, the dark, searching lines evolve into wider intervals as Harrer begins his awakening in the presence and tutelage of the Dalai Lama. Thirdly, Williams uses a mystic, atonal minimalist approach for the Dalai Lama's theme, a childlike motif which appears usually orchestrated for a single woodwind and percussion.

In "Harrer's Journey," a standout on the album, Williams gives a sense of urgency with pulsing cello and bass movements beneath the theme, as Harrer treks toward Tibet for, according to the liner notes, "reasons he cannot understand."

Although not used to as great an extent as in The Lost World, percussion plays an important part in the score. There are quiet, simplistic passages of cymbals, bells, and wood blocks evoking the bare spirituality of Harrer's new surroundings (helped by interpolations of two chants by the Gyuto Monks, "Mahakala" and "Yamantaka"); conversely, timpani, bass drums, and bongos create a threatening, unsettling atmosphere to the Chinese invasion of Tibet.

The lighter percussion appears again in "Premonitions," accompanying Ma's cello solo. Although this score's best string writing are in the full, rich chording a la Born on the Fourth of July and more recently Rosewood, Ma has some lovely passages, most notably in the title track and its reprise. Williams's cello solos never exercise Ma's talent as much as Elliot Goldenthal's oratorio "Fire Water Paper"—and in the film, the cello all but disappears until the closing credits—but Ma is given some shining moments on the CD.

"Premonitions" marks not only the score's middle, but the point at which the impressionistic percussion and woodwind writing (similar in sections to the composer's bassoon concerto) begins to slow the album down. Latter sections of the score are not as tempo-oriented as some of the early string cues and the single action piece, "Peter's Rescue."

Overall, Williams creates an interesting tapestry of percussion and strings, with some truly beautiful writing for solo and tutti. And as with each score he has composed since Schindler's List, Williams provides a work with astounding insight, obvious care, and distinct character.

-Brent A. Bowles

The End of Violence ★★★★★

RY COODER

Outpost OPD30007. 18 tracks - 58:08

As Ry Cooder reunites with director Wim Wenders 13 years after his legendary score for Paris, Texas, the resulting End of Violence is a dizzying blend of musical styles designed to capture the essence of Los Angeles. A lot of the material is executed in Cooder's familiar, heavily guitar-led style; the introductory tracks "Define Violence" and "Seeds of Violence," with Jim Keltner's laid-back drums and Cooder's solo, may even take Paris, Texas as their inspiration. But other examples, such as "What a City!" and "E-Mail," consist of soundscapes so ambiguous as to become meditative. Many instrumental soloists are given credit on the album, but in the bigger picture they become difficult to place or even identify amidst the hypnotic sound of Cooder's "tender, caring" guitar (as heavily reverbed as ever before). The only two exceptions are a "love theme" for accordion which, although at first seemingly out of place, becomes an integral part of the score's finale in "Paige," and the sparse, haunting jazz of Jacky Terrasson's solo piano in "Pourquoi?"

To broaden his style further, Cooder's use of computer-generated samples and programming is more extensive than we have seen before, although at no stage does it deride the acoustic environment he has created. These samples (wind effects and sirens, for example) play a background role in defining the L.A. soundscape, but in the seven-minute "You Shoot Him" they combine to create a distorted techno-funk with an onslaught of scary, unidentifiable sounds. This and the cocktail bossa-nova jazz of "Observatory" are two more elements of an impressively eclectic but well-grounded score.

-James Tornainen

Mimic ★★★½

MARCO BELTRAMI

Varèse Sarabande VSD-5863.

16 tracks - 32:03

Guillermo del Toro's Mimic, a suspenseful pastiche of monster-on-the-loose pictures, worked on nothing more than a visceral level, and it is from here that Marco Beltrami gains his dissonant, white-knuckle inspiration. With his growling horns and trombones, violent trumpet attacks, and surging, high-register strings, Beltrami has written an Altered States for the '90s, though with more of a cinematic approach. Beltrami's score to Scream staked out similar territory but seemed purposely overscored to highlight the tongue-in-cheekiness of Wes Craven's film. Mimic is more accomplished, a blend of the usual horror tricks and Beltrami's gripping dramatic sense, with a greater reliance on thematic material.

The album opens with the "Main Title," a haunting depiction of a city in decay. A soprano soloist represents a dying child, infected by a disease carried by cockroaches. Low brass take over after a dissonant crescendo, playing the theme with brutal force, a signal for the greater danger that awaits the characters (man-eating cockroaches!). "Time to Separate" introduces more thematic material, highlighting the human dimensions of the film, particularly the relationship between Mira Sorvino's and Jeremy Northam's characters. This is developed throughout the score, and heard finally in the moving "Reunited." Along with a theme for Manny, a character searching for his lost son, these give continuity to the music, and provide a lyricism absent in most scores these days. One can hear influences of Elliot Goldenthal and Christopher Young, but these are negligible.

As usual with this type of score, a little bit of music goes a long way, so the conservative running time is actually an asset. The last track, "La Cucaracha," is a pop song sung by Dillon Dixon.

-Jonathan Foster

Leave It to Beaver ★★½

RANDY EDELMAN

Varèse Sarabande VSD-5838. 14 tracks - 34:14

It's time to put the kibosh on small-to-big-screen adaptations. Sure, I enjoyed The Brady Bunch (and its follow-up, A Very Brady Sequel, which is even nuttier), but for every one of those rare successes, we end up with duds like Universal's recent "Trilogy of Terror"—Flipper, McHale's Navy, and Leave It to Beaver.

While Roger Ebert did give a "thumbs up" to Leave It to Beaver (just as he did for other Labor Day turkeys Excess Baggage and Hoodlum), the movie disappeared without a trace. It was not—as in the case of the *Brady*s—a satirical take on the old show, but rather just another cookie-cutter family picture, something that can be gathered from listening to Randy Edelman's typically enjoyable but by-the-numbers underscore. Edelman has wanted to leave the arena of formulaic comedies and kid pix, but he's back in familiar territory here, writing warm solo piano cues (think Dragon), jaunty

RATINGS

- ★★★★★ Best
- ★★★★ Really Good
- ★★★ Average
- ★★ Pretty weak
- ★ Worst

energetic tracks (Beethoven), and larger-than-life, uplifting combinations of orchestra and electronics (Gettysburg, Dragonheart). If your idea of a great time is listening to an orchestral concerto developed from Dave Khan and Melvyn Lenard's old theme to the Leave It to Beaver sitcom, then this is the album for you, but the comedy material makes even that grating: Edelman writes burlesquing, sneaking around cues and even goes so far as having one of his trumpet

The Full Monty ★★★

ANNE DUDLEY/VARIOUS

RCA Victor 09026-68904-2. 13 tracks - 45:27

Anne Dudley's score for this popular import about working class British lads who yearn to become male strippers only makes it onto a couple of tracks of this song-oriented album, but she creates a droll comic style that also demonstrates a nicely lyrical, sympathetic view of the film's characters. A mix of ska, reg-

Air Bud ★★

BRAHM WENGER

Hollywood Records HR-62134-2. 19 tracks - 41:13

Somebody out there likes Brahm Wenger, because this sort of crass Disney cute-animal fodder is the sort of thing that's made for song compilation albums. To underscore the tale of a basketball-playing dog who's saved from the clutches of an evil clown by a cute young lad (yeah, baby!), Wenger does at least manage to avoid the inevitable references to Pee Wee's Big Adventure by essaying a surprisingly harsh mix of comic brass and xylophone under strings for his title music. For a tale that's essentially Hoosiers with a dog, it's not surprising that the score's numerous "inspirational" passages evoke Randy Edelman's Dragon and Goldsmith's Rudy frequently (I stopped counting the big swells and cymbal crescendos early on); what's less expected are several mysterious, "spiritual"-sounding cues with electronics, a haunting minor-key piano melody and even some understated woodwind trills—right on! Unfortunately the comic material strays into abrasive territory just as frequently, making this a highly uneven listen. There's also a visit from '70s musical martyr Gilbert O'Sullivan ("Alone Again, Naturally") performing his "Clair." Let the good times roll... -Jeff Bond

BACK IN PRINT

1941 ★★★★★

JOHN WILLIAMS (1979)

Varèse Sarabande VSD-5832. 9 tracks - 38:07

John Williams's big, deliberately overblown score was about the only thing anyone liked about Steven Spielberg's disastrous 1979 WWII comedy, and I can still remember Williams premiering his march theme during a concert broadcast earlier in the year. Airplane! hadn't been made at this point, and Williams's approach doesn't quite presage Elmer Bernstein's brilliant self-satire in the Zucker Brothers movie: he's still scoring a conventional comedy in "The Sentries," "Riot at the U.S.O." (adapting the cartoon standby "The Rakes of Mallow") and "The Ferris Wheel Sequence" (now that's honesty in reporting). But he does suggest the route Bernstein would take by inserting a kind of hyper-patriotism and rah-rah "guts and glory" war-movie approach to his central march and the kinetic, frenzied "To Hollywood and Glory." The best cue, "The Battle of Hollywood," works on an almost purely serious, lyrical level: the opening moments, based around a brilliant, trilling flute figure (used as a signature for one character's puffing cigar) that launches a gorgeous romantic theme for strings and French horns, is one of Williams's most haunting and beautiful compositions.

Due to contractual entanglements, Varèse's CD reissue includes no extra music, and presents the same master and artwork as the out-of-print Bay Cities disc. This means it still contains the cannon sound effects, and the late John Belushi's contribution to the final cue, which makes me cringe in horror. It's welcome to have this title back in print, and the complete score can be found isolated on Universal's recent deluxe laserdisc of the film. -Jeff Bond

NOTES ON ER LIVE

ER regained my trust with its highly hyped and effective "ER Live" episode, about a documentary crew in the hospital. When I first heard this would also include live music, I was a little skeptical. This seemed a perfect time to show how a program can work without any music; NBC's dramatic Friday-night Homicide has pretty much no original music outside the opening credits. (Homicide in fact limits its episodic scoring to idiosyncratic use of music video-type montages, like an ironic use of Joan Osborne's "One Of Us" last season.)

The music first appeared (in the West Coast performance, at least) when a choking cancer patient is unable to say that he doesn't want to be resuscitated; it ended abruptly as another cameraman interviewed a janitor. The second musical entrance was better, with a man wandering the hospital playing his drumstick; this beat served as the basis for starting the cue (and got a shouted response from Anthony Edwards's Dr. Greene to stop that racket). Later, the ER piano music was used when Dr. Carter (Noah Wyle) lost a patient and got chewed out by Greene. These three cues spanned the typical use of music on ER.

Overall, the music made the program less of a documentary, placing the episode somewhere between its own reality and "real" reality—the old "real life/reel life" struggle of dramatic presentations. Apparently the ER producers wanted a quasi-documentary feel for this special, as opposed to the closer-to-documentary feel of the famous black-and-white *M*A*S*H* episode. ER stayed cinematic with Martin Davich and Steve Porcaro's performance, which cut through the thick mix of sound effects and dialogue. The flying-by-the-seat-of-the-pants production took away ER's usual finessed balance of dialogue and sound, but that added to the dizziness of the hour that made the live program work.

In the end, this was an experiment that probably will never be repeated, but it added to the excitement of one of TV's best shows. -Christopher Walsh players imitate a horse whinnying. Then there's the entirely unexpected appearance of John Williams's march to 1941...

What makes the Leave It to Beaver music slightly different is the way Edelman captures the innocent, '50s nostalgia connected with the original TV show with warm Americana writing. But while it all goes down nice and easy like a cold beverage on a warm summer's day, there's nothing we haven't heard from Edelman before. -Andy Dursin

Free Willy 3: The Rescue ★★★

CLIFF EIDELMAN

Varèse Sarabande VSD-5830. 12 tracks - 29:16

Cliff Edelman wasn't able to rescue Free Willy 3 from box-office oblivion, but his subdued score provides for pleasant listening. The music is eclectic, varying from busy seafaring action sequences to the expected sentimental passages, with a contemporary touch from piano and synthesized percussion.

Edelman wisely avoids overloading the score with sentimentality, instead concentrating on the movie's setting and suspenseful aspects, with oriental-sounding wind instruments and some Enya-like vocals. It's an approach that mixes intelligent restraint with obvious concessions to current pop sensibilities, and the result is neither fish nor foul: on a movie as dumb as this, maybe restraint isn't required. Basil Poledouris went for full-blooded emotion in his first Willy score, and Free Willy 3 ends the series with more of a whimper than a bang. -Jeff Bond gae, and tango voiced by woodwinds, strings, baritone saxophone and guitar with rhythm section keeps the score appropriately low-key, and Dudley seems to sneak in a little of Bill Conti's Rocky here and there to show the steely resolve of the movie's out-of-shape Chippendale's men. The songs ("Hot Stuff" by Donna Summer, Sister Sledge's "We Are Family" and Irene Cara doing "Flashdance") would be at home on the Priscilla: Queen of the Desert album. -Jeff Bond

Conspiracy Theory ★★★★★

CARTER BURWELL

TVT Soundtrax 813 0-2. 15 tracks - 40:53

Conspiracy Theory starred Mel Gibson as a kind of wacky Travis Bickle action hero, and throwing it into Richard Donner over-the-top land was Carter Burwell's infectious symphonic-jazz fusion. Everybody had a different "theory" (ahem) as to who Burwell was referencing—Mancini's Peter Gunn, Herrmann's Taxi Driver—but it sounds most like '60s John Barry to me, except much brighter. Many of the characteristics are there: the crisp, motivic building blocks, the rhythm section with a timpani, and the big-band brass and sax. Burwell ups the ante for the bad-guy scenes with overdubbed guitar and electronics—what Barry might have done in the '60s had it been around. The softer moments bear Burwell's melodic stamp alone.

Even when it's annoying, this represents an audacious, thematic approach to a contemporary thriller, 180-degrees apart from the droning nothingness and clichéd synths you might expect. -Lukas Kendall

CD SOUNDTRACK SALE

54 Ace Ventura-Pet Detective	Newborn, etc.	54 Dirty Dancing II	Morris, etc.	56 Kindergarten Cop	Edelman	56 Presumed Innocent	Williams
56 Aces - Iron Eagle III	Manfredini	58 Diggstown	Howard	56 King of the Hill	Martinez	510 Prospero's Books	Nyman
54 Addams Family (TV)	Mozzy	56 Dinosaurs (TV)	McNicks	54 Knight Moves	Dudley	58 Public Eye	Isam
56 Addams Family Values (score)	Shaiman	56 Distinguished Gentleman	Edelman	56 Last Action Hero (score)	Kamen	510 Puppet Master 1 & 2	Band
58 Adventures of Huck Finn	Conti	54 Do the Right Thing	Lee	54 Last Days of Chez Nous	Grabowsky	56 Quantum Leap (TV)	Post + Bunch
58 After Dark, My Sweet	Jarvis	58 Doctor Mondrill + Demonic Toys	Band	56 Last Exit to Brooklyn	Knopfler	58 Quiz Show	Isam
54 Age of Innocence	E. Bernstein	510 Dr. Who- Earthshock (TV)	Howell, etc.	54 Legend of Prince Valiant (TV)	Exchange	58 Radioland Murders	McNeely
58 Agnes of God	DeLurie	56 Double Dragon	Ferguson	58 Legends of the Elm	Horner	510 Rage in Harlem (score)	E. Bernstein
58 Akira	Shoji	510 Double Impact	Kempel	56 Leprechaun 2	Elias	54 Rain Man	Zimmer, etc.
56 Alien Nation (TV)	Kurtz+Dorff	58 Drop Zone	Zimmer	56 Let Him Have It	Kamen	56 Raising Cain	Morriconi
510 Alien 3	Goldenthal	56 Dying Young	Howard	58 Lethal Weapon 2	Kamen	58 Rampage	Copeland
58 All Dogs Go to Heaven	Burns+Strouse	56 Earthquake	Williams	56 Lethal Weapon 3	Menken	510 Rapa Nui	C. Young
510 American Gladiators (TV)	Conti+Milner	56 Ed Wood	Shore	56 Life with Mikey	Davis	56 Raw Deal	Bahler
56 American Tail	Horner	510 Elephant Man	Morris	58 Lift to the Scaffold	Stewart	510 Razor's Edge	Nitzsche
56 American Tail-Fievel Goes West	Horner	510 Enemies, a Love Story	Jarvis	56 Lily Was Here	T. Newman	56 Real McCoy	Fiedel
58 And the Band Played On (TV)	Burwell	56 Excessive Force	C. Bernstein	58 Linguini Incident	Isam	56 Renaissance Man	Zimmer
54 And You Thought Your Parents...	Miller	56 Exit to Eden	Doyle	56 Little Man Tate	Silversher	58 Return to Snowy River	Rowland
56 Andre (score)	Rowland	56 Exotica	Danna	510 Little Mermaid (TV)	Chase+Rucker	510 Rich Man, Poor Man (TV)	North
58 Angels in the Outfield	Edelman	58 Far and Away	Williams	56 Little Nemo	DeLurie	56 Richie Rich	Silvestri
58 Angie	Goldsmith	510 Far North	Rambler	510 Little Romance	Jomy	58 Rising Sun	Takemitsu
510 Anna Mundi	Glass	56 Farwell My Concubine	Jiping	58 Little Thief	Poledouris	56 River Runs Through It	Isam
510 Antartica	Cake	54 Fearless	Jarvis, etc.	56 Lonesome Dove (TV)	E. Bernstein	56 Road to Wellville	Portman
56 Arabian Knight	Folk	58 Ferngully- Last Rainforest (score)	Silvestri	56 Lost in Yonkers	Isam	56 Robin Hood: Men in Tights	Mann
54 Arachnophobia	Jones, etc.	56 Few Good Men	Shaiman	56 Love at Large	Goldsmith	56 Robocop 2	Rosenman
510 Arctic Blue	McNicks	58 Final Analysis	Fenton	510 Love Field	Lai	56 Robocop 3	Poledouris
56 Arrival	Band	58 Flesh and Bone	T. Newman	510 Love Story	Edelman	54 Robocop: the Series (TV)	Gillis, etc.
56 Atlantic City	Legrand	54 Flipper	McNeely	56 Magdalene	Howard, etc.	54 Rock-a-Doodle	Kuerner
56 Babe	E. Bernstein	56 Fluke	Silvestri	56 Major League	Blanchard	510 Round Midnight	Hancock, etc.
56 Back to the Future II	Silvestri	58 Fly	Shore	54 Malcolm X (score)	Goldsmith	54 Rover Dangerfield	D. Newman
56 Back to the Future III	Silvestri	58 For Love or Money	Broughton	510 Malice	Rowland	56 Safe	Tomney
54 Backbeat (score)	Was	56 Forbidden Zone	Elfman	58 Man From Snowy River	Howard	510 Saint of Fort Washington	Howard
54 Bad Channels	Blas Oyster Cult	510 Forever Young	Goldsmith	510 Man in the Moon	DeLurie	58 Samantha	McNeely
510 Bad Girls	Goldsmith	510 Fraggles Rock (TV)	Balsam + Lee	510 Man Trouble	Horner	56 Savage Land	Baker
510 Ballard of the Irish Horse (TV)	Maloney	54 Freddie as F.R.O.7	Dundas	58 Man Without a Face	Petit	58 Saving the Wild Life (TV)	Davis
56 Bandolero (Project 3)	Goldsmith	56 Free Willy	Poledouris	56 Manon of the Spring	D. Newman, etc.	56 School Ties	Jarvis
510 Barbarians	Donaggio	56 Free Willy 2	Poledouris	56 Marrying Man	C. Young	58 Secret Garden	Prenner
510 Batman (RCA) (TV)	Hefli	54 Freejack	Jones, etc.	510 Max and Helen (TV)	Turner	56 Secret of NIMH (import)	Goldsmith
58 Batman-Mask of the Phantasm	Walker	56 Friday the 13th- the Series (TV)	Mofin	58 Melancholia	Walker	54 Shadow	Goldsmith
56 Bebe's Kids	Barnes	510 Fried Green Tomatoes (score)	T. Newman	510 Memoirs of an Invisible Man	Fenton	58 Shadow of the Wolf	Jarvis
56 Being Human	Gibbs	54 Frozen Assets	Tavera	58 Memphis Belle	Donaggio	510 Shattered	Silvestri
54 Benny & Joon	Portman	58 Garden	Turner	510 Meridian	Club One Orch.	56 Shawshank Redemption	T. Newman
510 Berlin Blues	Schiffman	56 Geronimo- American Legend	Cooder	58 Metropolis	Jordan + Savary	510 Shirley Valentine	Hamlisch+Russell
54 Betty Blue	Yard	56 Glenarry Glen Ross	Howard	56 Metropolitan	E. Bernstein	510 Shock to the System	Chang
58 Beyond Rangoon	Zimmer	54 Gods Must Be Crazy II	Fox	58 Midas Run	Levy	54 Shout	Edelman, etc.
510 Billy Bathgate	Isam	510 Golden Gate	Goldenthal	58 Mighty Morphin Power Rangers (TV)	Imperio Dream	54 Sidewalk Stories	Marder
54 Bingo	Gibbs	56 Gone With the Wind (Siyanan)	Sieiner	58 Miracle Mile	Shaiman	56 Silence of the Lambs	Shore
58 Black Roses	Solomon, etc.	56 Good Son	E. Bernstein	56 Misery	Subramaniam	58 Simple Twist of Fate	Edelman
54 Blaze	Wallace	56 Grand Canyon	Howard	56 Mississippi Masala	Robbins	56 Six Degrees of Separation	Goldsmith
56 Bodies, Rest & Motion	Converino	510 Great Mouse Detective	Mancini	510 Mr. and Mrs. Bridge	D. Newman	56 Sketch Artist (TV)	Isam
510 Body Bags	Carpenter	56 Great Muppet Caper	Raposo	54 Mr. Saturday Night	Shaiman	56 Sleeping with the Enemy	Goldsmith
56 Bopha	Horner	56 Green Card	Zimmer	58 Mrs. Parker and Vicious Circle	Isam	56 Sneakers	Horner
56 Born on the 4th of July	Williams	56 Groundhog Day	Fenton	56 Mr. Money	Lewis	58 Soapdish	Silvestri
510 Browning Version	Isam	58 Halloween 4	Howarth	56 Mobsters	Small	56 Son of the Pink Panther	Mancini
56 Buggy	Morriconi	56 Hand That Rocks the Cradle	Revell	58 Moderns	Isam	56 Specialist (score)	Barry
510 Captain Horatio Hornblower	Farnon	54 Handmaid's Tale	Sakamoto	56 Mondo New York	Pacheco	54 Speed (score)	Mancina
54 Captive	Edgc.	56 Hard Target	Revell	510 Much Ado About Nothing	Doyle	510 Stanley and Iris	Williams
56 Carillo's Way (score)	Doyle	58 Hardware	Boswell	510 Muppet Babies (TV)	Walsh + O'Day	56 Star Trek VI	Edelman
58 Celts (TV)	Brennan	54 Head	Thorne, etc.	56 Muppet Christmas Carol	Williams	58 State of Grace	Morriconi
58 Cemetery Club	E. Bernstein	54 Hear My Song	Altman	56 Murderers Among Us (TV)	Conti	56 Stay Tuned	Broughton, etc.
56 Chaplin	Barry	56 Heart of Midnight	Yanni	510 Music Box	Sarde	510 Strawberry Statement	Smith, etc.
58 Children of the Corn II	Licht	58 Heathers	D. Newman	56 My Cousin Vinny	Edelman	54 Suburban Commando	Frank
54 China Beach (TV)	Rubinstein, etc.	56 Heaven and Earth	C. Young	54 My Life	Barry	54 Sugar Hill	Blanchard, etc.
510 Christopher Columbus-Discovery	Edelman	56 Hellbound- Hellraiser II	Miller	510 Nadja	Conti	56 Swan Princess	DeAzevedo
56 City of Joy	Morriconi	56 Hellraiser III	Fenton	56 Nails (TV)	Newborn	510 Sweet Valley High (TV)	Levy
56 City Slickers	Shaiman	54 Hero	Jones, etc.	56 Naked Gun 2 1/2	Tahrizi	58 Tales From the Crypt (TV)	Elfman, etc.
56 City Slickers II	Shaiman	54 Hideaway	D. Newman	56 Navigator	Rubini	58 Talk Radio + Wall Street	Copeland
58 Client	Shore	58 Hoffa	Perilstein	510 Nemesis	Redford / Menken	54 Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles	DuPrez, etc.
56 Cliffhanger (score)	Jones	510 Hollywood Chainsaw Hookers	Williams	58 Newsies	Elfman	56 Terminal Velocity	McNeely
510 Cobb	Goldenthal	58 Home Alone 2 (score)	Broughton	56 Nightbreed	Robinson	510 That Was the Week That Was (TV)	Grainger + Lehrer
510 Cold Feet	Bahler	58 Homeward Bound II	Williams	510 Nightmare Cafe (TV)	Ferguson	58 Thirtysomething (TV)	Walden+Levin
54 Color of Night	Frontiere	56 Hook	Poledouris	54 Nothing But Trouble	Kamen, etc.	58 Three Men and a Little Lady	Howard
56 Conan the Barbarian	Poledouris	56 Hot Shots- Part Deux	Nitzsche	58 Of Mice and Men	Isam	56 Three Musketeers	Kamen
510 Connection	Redd	56 Hot Spot	Robbins	56 Oliver and Company	Redford, etc.	58 Three O'Clock High	Tangerine Dream
56 Consenting Adults	Small	56 Howard's End	Zimmer	56 On Deadly Ground	Poledouris	510 The Me Up, The Me Down	Morriconi
58 Cool World (score)	Isam	56 I'll Do Anything	Whitfield, etc.	58 Once Around	Horner	58 Time Cop	Isam
54 Cosby Show (TV)	Gardner	56 I'm Gonna Get You, Sucka	Morriconi	56 Only the Lonely	Jarvis	56 Tom and Jerry- the Movie	Mancini
58 Country	Gross	58 In the Line of Fire	Phelousing	56 Only You	Portman	58 Torn Curtain	Addison
54 Courier	MacManus	58 Inspector Morse- #1 (TV)	Phelousing	54 Orlando	Motom + Potter	56 Two Moon Junction	Elias
56 Cousins	Badalamenti	56 Inspector Morse- #3 (TV)	Doyle	56 Oscar	E. Bernstein	56 Universal Soldier	Frank
510 Crimes of Passion	Wakeman	56 Into the West	Gibbs	510 Othello (1952)	Lavagnino	58 Used People	Portman
510 Critics	D. Newman	56 Iron and Silk	McNeely	510 Pacific Heights	Zimmer	56 Wagon's East	Small
58 Crossing Delancey	Chihara	58 Iron Will	Williams	58 Pagemaster	Horner	58 War	T. Newman
56 Crying Game	Dudley	54 JFK	Frye	54 Paper	R. Newman	54 Wedding Banquet	Mader
510 Curly Sue	DeKruze	54 Jack Hanna's World (TV)	Manfredini	58 Passenger 57	Clarke	58 Welcome Home Rosy Carmichael	T. Newman
58 Dancers	Donaggio	58 Jason Goes to Hell	Williams	58 Pastime	Holldridge	56 We're Back- Dinosaur's Story	Horner
54 Dances with Wolves	Barry	56 Jaws 2	Petit	56 People Under the Stairs	Revell + Peake	510 Where Evil Lives	Perilstein
510 Dark Eyes	Lai	58 Jean de Florette	C. Young	510 Peter the Great (TV)	Rosenthal	58 White Palace	Fenton
510 Dark Half	C. Young	58 Jennifer 8	Duane, etc.	56 Philadelphia (score)	Shore	56 White Sands	O'Hearn
58 Dark Shadows-Vol. I (TV)	Cobert	54 Jimmy Hollywood	Robertson, etc.	58 Planet of the Apes (Project 3)	Goldsmith	54 Wild at Heart	Badalamenti
510 Death Becomes Her	Silvestri	58 Johnny Yesso	Voltaire	56 Player	T. Newman	54 World Apart	Zimmer
56 Delusion	Adamson	58 Josh and S.A.M.	T. Newman	510 Point of No Return	Zimmer	58 Wyatt Earp	Howard
510 Demolition Man (score)	Goldenthal	56 Joy Luck Club	Portman	54 Power of One	Zimmer	58 Year of Living Dangerously	Jarvis
510 Desperately Seeking Susan	T. Newman	58 Jungle Book	Poledouris	58 Prelude to a Kiss	Shore	58 Zulu (Fat Boy)	Barry
54 Dick Tracy (score)	Elfman	54 Ketchup and Mustard Man	McAbee

SCREEN CREDIT

The trumpet and flugelhorn solos on the soundtrack of

"L.A. CONFIDENTIAL"

were played by

MALCOLM BOYD MCNAB

Disc-Connection - New Web Site

www.Disc-Connection.com

Retail store since 1971! We will be taking orders on in-print and out of print (when available) CDs and LPs (mostly hard to find). LPs always new-sealed or like new, used. Catalog on request; low low prices!

CD AUCTION

Antony and Cleopatra - John Scott
Apollo 13 - promo copy, MCA, no dialogue
Awakenings - Randy Newman
Beast - Isham
Big Country - Moross SC 1R JM
'Body Heat (numbered)
Buffalo Girls - Lee Holdridge
La Califfa - Morricone
'The Cable Guy (score only, promo)
Duck You Sucker - Morricone (Germany)
Frantic - Morricone
Funny Lady - Bay Cities
Gatto a Nove Code - Morricone
Licence to Kill - Kamen (scratched but works)
Major Payne - Craig Safan, promo
The Old Man and the Sea - Tlomkin
'The Outlaw Josey Wales - J. Fielding Collection
The Proud Rebel - Moross
Quillier Memorandum - Barry
Regarding Henry - Zimmer
Revolver (sealed) Morricone
Roxanne - Smeaton
Spies Like Us - Bernstein
Three Musketeers (Bay Cities)
Legrand
10th Victim - Piero Piccioni

Best of Twilight Zone Vol. II

V - Final Battle - Dennis McCarthy

'War at Home - Poledouris promo

We're No Angels (Numbered 9102.12)
Fenton

The Wild Bunch - Special Edition Screen Classics 3

Year of the Gun - Bill Conti

'Jerry Fielding Film Music 1 (Bay Cities, 2CDs)

Jerry Fielding Film Music 2 (Bay Cities)

Jerry Fielding Film Music 3 (Bay Cities)

'Fred Karlin, Vol. 1 (promo only)

'Honor and Glory: Basil Poledouris (promo only)

MGM/UA Sampler (23 original cuts from United Artists films)

'Chris Young 5CD Set (incl. Species) (promo only)

Chris Young Vol. 1 (promo only)

'Starred Titles, Min. Bid $100.00

Minimum Bid on Everything Else $30.00

For Updates, Please Mail or Fax a Bid First

CLOSING DATE

12/5/97

Disc-Connection
7990 Sunset Blvd

Los Angeles CA 90046

ph/fax (213) 650-2464

CDs, Records. Specializing in: Hard to Find Records, Soundtracks, Shows, Rock, Nostalgia, New and Used. Used CDs, LPs & Cassettes Bought & Sold, Cash or Credit. Order by mail, or visit our store, corner of Laurel and Sunset.

We Have Thousands of LP Soundtracks Available—Please Send Want Lists!

CDs for Trade

Complete set (14 titles) of Varese Club CDs
Hermann Concert Suites (Masters F.M. SRS 2005.6.7.8)
Obsession (Masters F.M. SRS 2004)
Serpent and the Rainbow (Varese)
SpaceCamp (J. Williams)

CDs for Sale/Trade

101 Dalmatians $10
2010 $75
5 Corners $25
Accidental Tourist - trade
Airport $12
Aladdin $8
Alfred Hitchcock Film Music $10
Always $10
Arachnophobia $5
Big Blue - French Import 2CD $20
Broken Arrow $10
Children of the Corn II $10
Classic Miklós Rózsa $10
Courage Under Fire $12
Cronos $40
Crucible $8
Dad $25
Day of the Dolphin $65
Dead Poets Society $10
Death Becomes Her $10
Demolition Man - score $40
Dennis the Menace $8
Drugstore Cowboy - trade
Dreamscape $35
Enter the Dragon - Warner Japan, 1st issue $60
Elmer Bernstein by E. Bernstein $12

Epic Film Music of Miklós Rózsa - Silva $10
Eraser $10
Escape from L.A. - score $10
Fantasia Selections - promo $30
Glory $10
For Whom the Bell Tolls $20
Hello Again $10
Hemingway's Adventures of a Young Man $30
Horror 8 Sci-Fi Music - Milan Import $20
Homeward Bound: Lost in S.F. $7
Hot Shots $25
Hunchback of Notre Dame $10
Independence Day $11
JFK $20
Leopard Son $10
Lion in Winter (CBS) $10
Meridian $10
Metropolis $10
Moon over Parador $45
Mountains of the Moon $30
Mystic Warrior - promo $50
Newsies $10
Night of the Running Man $8
Nun's Story $20
Once Upon a Time in the West (Import) $13
Oliver & Co. - orig. $10
Paperhouse $20
Polly $20
Puppet Master I-II $10
Rampage $8
Raw Deal $10
Revenge $20
Rich in Love $10
Ricochet $25
Rudy $10
Rumble Fish $11
Scalphunters/Hang 'em

High/Way West $50
Shipwrecked $45
Shy People - Varese $40
Sicilian $35
Sirens $10
Specialist - score $20
Starman $10
Superman $10
Thief of Hearts $25
Total Recall $12
Welles Raises Kane/ Obsession $12
Where Angels Fear to Tread $10
Where the River Runs Black $20
Who Framed Roger Rabbit? $50
Willow $25
Witness $25
Year of Living Dangerously $10
Year of the Comet $10

★ Discount on Bulk Orders!
• Shipping Extra at Reasonable Cost
• Have More CD Titles. Please call or write w/ specific wants.

CD Want List

Alan Silvestri 3rd promo
Batteries Not Included
Blue Iguana
Big Country box set
Border Radio
Boys from Brazil
Bruce Babcock
Chouans!
Colin Towns Promo One
Complot, Le
Copacabana (Barry Manilow, TV)
Dawn of the Dead (Varese only)
El Amour Brujo (VCD 47219)

Eric & David Wurst m.f.f.
Film Music of F. Waxman - RCA
French Revolution I-II
Friday the 13th (Milan)
Georg Elser
Goldsmith's Suites and Themes (MFM)
Grand Prix
Jane Eyre J. Williams
Kling Kong Lives (Japan)
Krush Groove
Last Dragon, The
Latin Amer. Symphonette (VCD 47237)
Le Batard de Dieux
Liquid Sky
Made in Heaven
Music by Bellis Vol. 1
Octopussy (ABM only)
Revers, The (MFM only)
Rhinestone (IRCA)
Runaway
Runaway Train
Sunchaser
Superman II-III
Suspect
Symphony in F-sharp opus 40 (VSD 5346)
Saga of the Prairies (VCD 47211)
Three Corners Hat (VCD 47210)
Tokyo Blackout
Works by Ravel (VCD 47209)

LPs only

Les Ripoux
Mad Monster Party (RR 1001)
Soldaat von Oranje

LEIGH BUCK
6736 ANTHONY AVE
GARDEN GROVE CA
92845-3006
U.S.A.
(714) 894-6117

Crippled
DICK HOT WAX I

Sexy CD's & LP's
$12 post paid
USA & Canada

Crippled Dick Hot Wax
P.O. Box 1270
NY, NY 10116

Gert Wilden & Orchestra

Schoolgirl

Report

Casablanca ★★★★★^{1/2}

MAX STEINER (1942)

Rhino Movie Music R2-72911. 20 tracks - 64:29

It would be a gross understatement to describe Rhino's release of Max Steiner's score to the screen classic Casablanca as "long-awaited." If there has been a more obvious candidate for a popular soundtrack album release I can't think of it. Steiner's score is a richly romantic effort, wedded to a film that has become one of the great cultural artifacts of this century—and it sports a catchy little song to boot.

The hour-long Rhino CD has everything soundtrack aficionados have grown to hate: loads of dialogue and an equally bountiful collection of source music. Yet somehow the approach (engendered by necessity, as well as producers George Feltenstein and Bradley Flanagan) works to create an unusually satisfying whole. Dialogue is the bane of the soundtrack collector, but when it's as good and as culturally certified as this, it's worth preserving in more than one medium. Feltenstein and Flanagan cover their bets well by including several of the more crucial dialogue-laden cues (particularly Steiner's sublime conclusion) sans dialogue at the end of the CD, allowing the listener to program much of the score dialogue-free.

Casablanca has all the trademarks of a Max Steiner score: the bold lushness, the heavy tread of melodramatic brass, the rich string section, the musical quotations... although it's bereft of a distinguishing Steiner title theme due to the choice to use Herman Hupfeld's 1931 "As Time Goes By." Steiner's opening, pulsating with low percussion and a spectacular, exotic brass theme (developed from his own Lost Patrol score), simply and evocatively sets the Moroccan locale and even introduces some mysterious effects of piano and celeste, all without laying down any of the score's spine. Although Steiner employed "As Time Goes By" with reluctance (and apparently required a goad from orchestrator Hugo Friedhofer before he figured out exactly how to use it), his eventual setting of the tune makes for one of the great blends of romance and nostalgia in film, balanced neatly with a grand, descending melodic line that underscores the bitter, star-crossed nature of Rick and Ilsa's relationship. Steiner employs both (with the descending melody blasted out by the brass as the plane Ilsa must depart on starts its engines) to create a deliriously engaging finale that moves effortlessly from loss and anguish as Rick and Ilsa part, to a giddy, nationalistic triumph as Rick moves on to his new role as a freedom fighter.

Considering the half-century age of the recordings (and the fact that the score was essentially considered to be lost), sound isn't half bad, but there are plenty of crunchy recording artifacts lurking about, particularly in the supplemental material. An indication of how difficult it was to assemble this album appears near the end of track 9, when sound effects intrude during the final seconds of what had been to that point a music-only cue. As if the great score and dialogue weren't enough, there's also plenty of songs ("It Had to

Golden Age, New CDs

Classics of Hollywood's golden era surface at last in loving reissues.

Reviews by
JEFF BOND

Be You," "Shine," and "Knock on Wood") performed by the great Dooley Wilson.

The Searchers ★★★★★^{1/2}

MAX STEINER (1956)

Screen Archives Ent. FMA/MS101. 37 tracks - 65:32

John Ford's classic western The Searchers was done late in Max Steiner's career, but the savagery of the emotions in Ford's unflinching tale of vengeance and race-hatred in the old West brought Steiner back to some of the pulsing, primitive rhythms of his seminal King Kong score as he accompanied an obsessed John Wayne in his search for niece Natalie Wood after her kidnapping by Comanches.

Like many Ford westerns, this one opens with a song sung by the Sons of the Pioneers, which Steiner quotes frequently throughout the film, although there's a bit less of the composer's quotation habit in evidence than in some of his other efforts. One exception is the fife and drum march "Garry Owen," which is associated in several scenes with the U.S. Cavalry (and later used to brutal ironic effect in Arthur Penn's Little Big Man). Steiner gets off some spectacular effects, notably an all-timpani section during a buffalo stampede and some meandering, eerie piano runs in a dramatic campfire scene. On the softer side is a tender theme for the Indian squaw encountered by Wayne and young Jeffrey Hunter (that's Captain Pike to some of our readers).

This album, licensed by Warner Bros., was a collaboration between Washington, D.C.-based soundtrack retailer Screen Archives Entertainment (call 202-364-4333 to order) and Brigham Young University, which houses the Steiner collection of acetates. The production is peerless, with probing, analytical liner notes by Jack Smith of Films in Review and some great artwork and stills from the film. If you're a fan of Steiner or the film, this album is a must-have.

How the West Was Won ★★★★★^{1/2}

ALFRED NEWMAN (1962)

Rhino Movie Music R2-72458.

Disc One: 27 tracks - 70:44. Disc Two: 31 tracks - 68:14

Rhino's How the West Was Won is one of the greatest pieces of soundtrack preservation ever, brilliantly produced and with extensive liner notes by Didier Deutsch. The packaging is spectacular, and the sound the best that could possibly be achieved; someone on the Internet keeps insisting that the instrumental and vocal tracks are out of synch somewhere, but I'm not going to look for it. Alfred Newman's credentials as a film composer are beyond reproach, and this is one of his best-known works, a rollicking western extravaganza for the Cinerama epic that took three big-time film directors and a wagon train full of stars to make.

I have already been in at least one argument over the Internet about the relative merits of this score, so I will try not to start another one here. But for those who believe that they're going to get two and a half hours of something like The Magnificent Seven or Silverado by purchasing this album, a few things should be made clear.

First of all, How the West Was Won is for all practical purposes a musical.

Newman collaborated with composer and choral director Ken Darby on songs for the film, many belted out with unparalleled brassiness by Debbie Reynolds. There are many, many vocals on this album, and if you're not in that giddy, rally-round-the-campfire sing-along kind of mood you may find yourself being driven up the walls by songs like "Raise a Ruckus Tonight" and "Wait for the Hoedown."

Newman's instrumental score is rich, spectacular and memorable, particularly his big, bold and indelible main theme. But like many of his predecessors, his approach to this kind of celebration of the American West is to quote every melodic standard from Greensleeves (around 20 times) to the Battle Hymn of the Republic. When Newman is content to characterize the landscape or score the action, the score is atmospheric and convincing, and more than capable of appealing to the modern ear. But it often feels like you have to cut through layers of traditional melodies and songs to get to that point. So while I will not dispute this score's place in the great pantheon of western movie scores, I do want to warn people that some heavy programming duties are ahead of them if they're not prepared to sample its varied gifts. •

Top: BMI presented David Arnold with his BMI Film Award for Independence Day on August 20, 1997. L-R: Producer Dean Devlin, Arnold, BMI VP Doreen Ringer-Ross, director Roland Emmerich.

Below Left: Mark Snow signed X-Files CDs at Creature Features in Burbank, CA, late 1996.

Below: ASCAP hosted a cabaret evening with lyricist David Zippel to celebrate his work on Disney's Hercules, July 9, 1997. L-R: ASCAP's Director of Musical Theater, Michael Kerker, who produced the event; musical director Michael Skloff; performers Sharon McNight, Nancy Dussault, Brian Lane Green, Karen Fineman, Jenifer Lewis; lyricist David Zippel; performer David Pomeranz; ASCAP President/Chairman Marilyn Bergman with co-lyricist Alan Bergman; ASCAP's Assistant VP Nancy Knutsen.

EVENTS Round-Up 1997

Photos from Recent Film Music
Gatherings
Sponsored by ASCAP, BMI,
the SCL and more!

Left: BMI sponsored a panel on television music at the Museum of Television and Radio, June 4, 1997. L-R: Composers Mark Mothersbaugh, Earle Hagen, Lalo Schiffrin, W.G. Snuffy Walden.

Below Left: The Society for Composers and Lyricists and The Hollywood Reporter held their first film music conference at the Director's Guild building in Los Angeles, February 22, 1997. L-R: SCL VP Alex Shapiro, SCL First VP Charles Bernstein, keynote speaker Jerry Goldsmith, Hollywood Reporter Publisher and Editor-in-Chief Robert J. Dowling, SCL President Jay Chattaway.

Zippel & SCL
pix by Lester
Cohen. All others shot themselves.

Right: Stephen James Taylor, Lukas Kendall, Stanley Clarke and Kamara Cambon at a "meet the composers" BMI luncheon, June 19, 1997.

Fahrenheit 451 Dept.

Volume One, 1993-96

Issues are 24 pages unless noted. Most 1993 editions are now xeroxes only.

#30/31, February/March 1993, 64 pages

Maurice Jarre, Basil Poledouris, Jay Chattaway, John Scott, Chris Young, Mike Lang; the secondary market, Ennio Morricone albums, Elmer Bernstein Film Music Collection LPs; 1992 in review.

#32, April 1993, 16 pages

Temp-tracking Matinee, SPFM 1993 Conference Report, angry Star Trek music editorial.

#33, May 1993, 12 pages

Book reviews, articles on classical/film connection.

#34, June 1993, 16 pages

Goldsmith SPFM award dinner report; orchestrators & what they do, Lost in Space, recycled Hermann; review spotlights on Christopher Young, Pinocchio, Bruce Lee film scores.

#35, July 1993, 16 pages

Tribute to David Kraft; John Beal Part 1; scores vs. songs, Hermann Christmas operas; Film Composers Dictionary.

#36/37, August/September 1993, 40 pages

Elmer Bernstein, Bob Townson (Varèse), Richard Kraft and Nick Redman Part 1, John Beal Part 2; reviews of CAM CDs; collector interest articles, classic corner, fantasy film scores of Elmer Bernstein.

#38, October 1993, 16 pages

John Debney (SeaQuest DSV), Richard Kraft and Nick Redman Part 2.

#39, Nov. 1993, 16 pages

Richard Kraft and Nick Redman Part 3, Fox CDs, Nightmare Before Christmas and Bride of Frankenstein review spotlights.

#40, Dec. 1993, 16 pages

Richard Kraft and Nick Redman Part 4; Re-recording The Magnificent Seven for Koch.

#41/42/43, January/Feb./March 1994, 48 pages

Elliot Goldenthal, James Newton Howard, Kitaro and Randy Miller (Heaven & Earth), Rachel Portman, Ken Darby; Star Wars trivia/cue sheets; sexy album covers; music for westerns overview; 1993 in review.

#44, April 1994

Joel McNeely, Basil Poledouris (On Deadly Ground); SPFM Morricone tribute report and photos; lots of reviews.

#45, May 1994

Randy Newman (Maverick), Graeme Revell (The Crow); Goldsmith in concert; in-depth reviews: The Magnificent Seven and Schindler's List; Instant Liner Notes, book reviews.

#46/47, June/July 1994

Patrick Doyle, James Newton

Howard (Wyatt Earp), John Morgan (restoring Hans Salter scores); Tribute to Henry Mancini; overview: Michael Nyman music for films, collectible CDs.

#48, August 1994

Mark Mancina (Speed); Chuck Cirino & Peter Rotter; Richard Kraft: advice for aspiring film composers; classical music in films; new CAM CDs; Cinerama LPs; best-selling soundtrack CDs.

#49, September 1994

Hans Zimmer (The Lion King), Shirley Walker; Laurence Rosenthal on the Vineyard; Hans Salter in memoriam; classical music in films; John Williams in concert; Recordman at the flea market.

#50, October 1994

Alan Silvestri (Forrest Gump), Mark Isham; sex and soundtrack sales; Lalo Schiffrin in concert; Ennio Morricone Beat CDs; that wacky Internet; Recordman on liner notes.

#51, November 1994

Howard Shore (Ed Wood), Thomas Newman (Shawshank Redemption), J. Peter Robinson (Wes Craven's New Nightmare), Lukas's mom interviewed; music of Helmut, Star Trek; promos.

#52, December 1994

Eric Serra, Marc Shalman Part 1, Sandy De Crescent (music contractor), Valencia Film Music Conference, SPFM Conference Part 1, StarGate liner notes, Shostakovich Anonymous.

#53/54, January/February 1995

Marc Shalman Part 2, Dennis McCarthy (Star Trek); Sergio Bassetti, Jean-Claude Petit and Armando Trovajoli in Valencia;

Music and the Academy Awards Part 1; rumored LPs, quadrasonic LPs.

#55/56, March/April 1995

Basil Poledouris (The Jungle Book), Alan Silvestri (The Quick and the Dead), Joe Lo Duca (Evil Dead), Oscar and Music Part 2, Recordman's Diary, SPFM Conference Report Part 2.

#57, May 1995

Jerry Goldsmith in concert, Bruce Broughton on Young Sherlock Holmes, Miles Goodman interviewed, 1994 Readers Poll, Star Trek overview.

#58, June 1995

Michael Kamen (Die Hard), Royal S. Brown (film music critic), Recordman Loves Annette, History of Soundtrack Collecting Part 1.

#59/60, July/Aug. 1995, 48 pages

Sex Sells Too (sexy LP covers, lots of photos), Maurice Jarre interviewed, Miklós Rózsa Remembered, History of Soundtrack Collecting Part 2, film music in concert pro and con.

#61, September 1995

Elliot Goldenthal (Batman Forever), Michael Kamen Part 2, Chris Lennertz (new composer), Star Trek: The Motion Picture (analysis), classical music for soundtrack fans.

#62, October 1995

Danny Elfman Part 1, John Ottman (The Usual Suspects), Robert Townson (Varèse Sarabande), Top Ten Most Influential Scores, Goldsmith documentary reviewed.

#63, November 1995

James Bond Special Issue! John Barry and

James Bond (history/overview), Eric Serra on GoldenEye, essay, favorites, more. Also: History of Soundtrack Collecting Part 3, Davy Crockett LPs.

#64, December 1995

Danny Elfman Part 2 (big!), Steve Bartek (orchestrator), Recordman Meets Shaft: The Blaxploitation Soundtracks, Michael Kamen Part 3, re-recording House of Frankenstein.

#65/66/67, January/February/March 1996, 48 pages

Thomas Newman, Toru Takemitsu, Robotech, Star Trek, Ten Influential Composers; Philip Glass, Heitor Villa-Lobos, songs in film, best of '95, film music documentary reviews (Hermann, Delerue, Takemitsu, "The Hollywood Sound").

#68, April 1996

David Shire's The Taking of Pelham One Two Three; Carter Burwell (Fargo), gag obituaries, Apollo 13 promo/bootleg tips.

#69, May 1996

Music in Plan 9 from Outer Space; John Walsh's funny movie music glossary; Hermann and Rózsa radio programs; Irwin Allen box set review; John Bender's "Into the Dark Pool" column.

#70, June 1996

Mark Mancina (Twister), final desert island movie lists, Jeff Bond's summer movie column, TV's Biggest Hits book review.

#71, July 1996

David Arnold (Independence Day), Michel Colombier, Recordman Goes to Congress,

Jeff Bond's summer movie column.

#72, August 1996

Ten Best Scores of '90s, Thomas Newman's The Player, Escape from L.A., conductor John Mauceri, reference books, Akira Ifukube CDs.

#73, September 1996

Recordman on War Film Soundtracks Part 1; Interview: David Scheder: Monstrous Movie Music; Akira Ifukube CDs Part 2, Miles Goodman obituary.

#74, October 1996

Action Scores in the '90s (big intelligent article); Cinemusic '96 report (John Barry, Zhou Jiping); Vic Mizzy interviewed.

#75, November 1996

John Barry: Cinemusic Interview (very big); Recordman on War Film Soundtracks Part 2, Jeff Bond's review column.

#76, December 1996

Interviews: Randy Edelman, John Barry part 2, Ry Cooder (Last Man Standing); Andy Dursin's laserdisc column, Lukas's review column.

Volume Two

New color cover format! Issues of 32-48 pages:

Vol. 2, No. 1, Jan./Feb. 1997

First in new format! Star Wars issue: John Williams interview, behind the Special Edition CDs, commentary, cue editing minutia/trivia, more. Also: Jeff Bond's review column.

Vol. 2, No. 2, Mar./Apr. 1997

All Clausen: The Simpsons (big interview); promotional CDs; Congress in Valencia; Readers Poll 1996 and Andy's picks; Into the Dark Pool Part 2 by John Bender.

Vol. 2, No. 3, May 1997

Michael Fine: Re-recording Miklós Rózsa's film noir scores; reviews: Polltergeist, Mars Attacks!, Rosewood, more; Lukas's and Jeff Bond's review columns.

Vol. 2, No. 4, June 1997

Danny Elfman (Men in Black), Promos Part 2, Martin Denny and Exotica, Lady in White, the Laserphile on DVDs, obituary: Brian May, The Fifth Element reviewed.

Vol. 2, No. 5, July 1997

Elliot Goldenthal (Batman & Robin), Mark Mancina (Con Air, Speed 2), George S. Clinton (Austin Powers), ASCAP & BMI award photos; Reviews: Crash, Lost World.

Vol. 2, No. 6, August 1997

Lalo Schiffrin (Money Talks), John Powell (Face/Off), Marc Shalman (George of the Jungle); remembering Tony Thomas; Jeff Bond summer movie report, TV sweeps.

Vol. 2, No. 7, September 1997

Hans Zimmer vs. FSM (big interview, Peacemaker cover), Marco Beltrami (Scream, Mimic), Curtis Hanson (L.A. Confidential); Andy Dursin: Laserphile, John Bender: Film Music as Fine Art, Recordman.

Yes, I want to order some back issues. I have circled the magazines that I want:

30/31 32 33 34 35 36/37 38 39 40 41/42/43 44 45 46/47 48
49 50 51 52 53/54 55/56 57 58 59/60 61 62 63 64 65/66/67
68 69 70 71 72 73 74 75 76 V2: N1 2 3 4 5 6 7 Index
1993 (#30-40) 1994 (#41-52) 1995 (#53-64) 1996 (#65-76)

M O N T H L Y

I'm enclosing $3.50 for a single issue, $3.00 each for two or more, $2.50 for six or more, or $2.00 each for twelve or more; or, $18 each for the whole-year deals:

Name _____

Address _____

City/State/Zip _____

International orders please include an additional $3.00 for shipping. U.S. funds only. Thanks!

Film Score Monthly, 5455 Wilshire Blvd, Suite 1500, Los Angeles CA 90036-4201, USA

Citadel

Founded by Tony Thomas, 1976

From the entertainment Citadel of the world!

STC 77111

A quintessential Rozsa album highlighted by the 16 minute-plus "Fantasy on Themes from Young Bess." Conducted by Elmer Bernstein and Rainer Padberg. Produced by George Korngold and Christopher Palmer. 20-bit transfer of the original 16-bit digital. Extensive notes, lavish 16 page booklet with many color photos.

STC 77112

Based on the best-selling book, Holdridge's sensational score for ABC's COLUMBIA TRISTAR Sunday Night Movie is superbly performed by the Philharmonia Orchestra of London, with added unusual instruments and exotic percussion. Audiophile direct to two-channel recording results in what Holdridge describes as "a wonderful immediacy and presence that puts the listener sitting right up in front or standing next to me conducting the orchestra." DDD

STC 77110

Suites from two Les Baxter Original Soundtracks. Mario Bava's Black Sunday starred Barbara Steele and is one of the most poetic vampire films ever made; it and Baron Blood are a tribute to the director's masterly touch. This collector's item reappears with improved 20-bit digital transfer sonics, expanded notes, and additional photos.

CTD 88127 First complete release of the 1983 Cast Recording of Gates' tuneful 1947 musical (includes 30 minutes not on original Varese 'highlights' Lp). Utah Symphony and soloists conducted by the composer. DDD

STC 77109 Mark Mothersbaugh's jazzy, percussive score helps maintain the momentum. "Variety. Also includes original songs by The Iguanas and new performances of 'standards' - produced by Los Lobos' Cesar Rosas. DDD

STC 77108 Includes Tiomkin's A President's Country (themes from Red River, The Alamo, Duel in the Sun, Giant, Rawhide) and Hans J. Salter's Original Soundtrack for Wichita Town as well as Farnon's "Horatia Hornblower," both composer-conducted.

STC 77107 Les Baxter conducts his suites from Cry of the Banshee and Edgar Allen Poe, formerly on Citadel Lp, now with John Cacavas' soundtrack for Horror Express - starring Telly Savalas, Christopher Lee, and Peter Cushing. 20-bit remaster.

STC 77106 Two original orchestral TV soundtracks by Daniel Licht - one of Hollywood's most interesting young talents - on one CD. Zooman features Louis S. Gossett, Jr. Woman Undone stars Mary McDonnell and Randy Quaid. Reversible "double cover." DDD

STC 77105 Original Soundtracks. "The House" is the first release of ELMER BERNSTEIN'S score for the 1955 (stereo) art film. Originally on Citadel Lp his Midas Run (1969) has been vastly improved sonically, as has HENRY MANCINI'S The Night Visitor. Composer-conducted.

STC 77104 Original Orchestral Soundtrack for Disney's 1994 Donald Sutherland film "...Colin Towns" score rank(s) several notches above most of the Sci-Fi thriller material one comes across these days. Towns generates considerable foreboding and atmosphere... - Royal S. Brown, Fanfare. DDD

STC 77103 Charles Gerhardt and The London Symphony Orchestra in a spectacular program of Lee Holdridge's music from Splash, The Beastmaster, Wizards and Warriors, Jonathan Livingston Seagull, East of Eden. Remastered for improved clarity and impact. George Korngold, producer. DDD

STC 77102 Original Motion Picture Soundtrack. Lee Holdridge conducts his superb fully symphonic score for the 1994 film starring Richard Keil and Cloris Leachman. Magnificent orchestration, sweeping melodies; music in the tradition of the great "Western" epics.

STC 77101 The original score. First CD release of the 1957 stereo recording of Leith Stevens' music for the George Pal film. "One of Hollywood's most gifted composers...Here is the chance to hear him at his absolute best." - Royal S. Brown, Fanfare. Reversible "double cover."

Of related interest: CTD 88109 ERIC WOLFGANG KORNGOLD piano compositions performed by Antonin Kubalek. Critically acclaimed 79 minute-plus CD!

For further information, see Citadel's Web page: <http://www.earthlink.net/~citadel>

Citadel Records Corporation, 6455 Ben Ave., North Hollywood, CA 91606 ph:818-985-7409 fax:818-985-7921

Citadel Records is an affiliate of Klavier Records International P.O. Box 177 San Juan Capistrano, CA 92675

20 Bit Digital